New Revelations in a Celebrated Case.

PROMINENT JURIST INVOLVED.

A Heroic Woman Imperils Her Life to Rescue Her Brother—Creighton Convicted.

[Associated Press Dispatches to the HERALD.]

SAN FRANCISCO, October 1.—Another great sensation was occasioned to-day by the publication of a new episode in the Sarah Althea Hill suit. Ex-Judge D. S. Terry, one of the counsel for Sarah Althea Sharon in the well-known suit against the executors of the estate of the late Senator Sharon, has filed an affidavit in the Superior Court, in which he charges that one of the defendant's counsel, who was an ex-Judge, during the trial of the case in the Superior Court offered Judge Sullivan, before whom the case was tried, checks duly signed with the amount left blank, to be filled in by the Judge, if he could be tempted to accept the bribe, with such sum as he might choose as a consideration for deciding the case in favor of defendant. The only one of Sharon's counsel who is an ex-Judge is Oliver P. Evans. It is understood that Judge Evans called upon Judge Sullivan after the affidavit had been made public and demanded to know if he was authority for the statement, but Judge Sullivan declined to give a definite answer.

A SANGUINARY RESULT FEARED.

Among the few people who are cognizant of all or part of the facts of this affair it has created a profound sensation. Said one gentleman to-day: "This is the most serious matter that ever concerned the bench and bar of this city, and how it can end without bloodshed I cannot conceive. Judge Terry is everywhere regarded as a man of truth. Judge Evans, I understand, denies the charge in toto and insists that he is the party pointed at. Judge Sullivan is regarded as an upright judge and a man of honor. Terry, if he was informed of the open-check offer, could only have had one source of information; the party to whom the offer was made, if it was made.

RETICENCE COUNSELLED.

Friends of Judge Sullivan in whom he has confidence, it is stated, have advised him under no circumstances to make any statement to the press at present.

A Sister's Heroism.

TEMPLETON, October 1.—On the ranch of Newell Stone, G. A. Peterson, who was digging a well for Stone, went down the well this morning and was overcome by gas. His sister, Miss Annie Peterson, insisted upon going down to his relief, and was also overcome. A third party went down part way and gave a sign to be hoisted out, as the gas was overpowering. A messenger was immediately sent to this town for assistance, which was quickly given. On the arrival of assistance, a party was lowered into the well. Miss Peterson was brought out barely alive; her brother was brought to the surface immediately after, but life was extinct. The doctors think that by careful nursing and attention Miss Peterson may recover.

That Embracery Case.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 1.—The case of Ex-Senator Creighton, charged with jury-bribing closed this afternoon. Judge Sullivan, in charging the jury, instructed them to find defendant guilty if they believed he had offered to corrupt jurors. Whether any money had been paid or not was immaterial. The jury then, at three o'clock, retired.

GUILTY AS CHARGED.

The jury in the case of ex-Senator D. J. Creighton, indicted for embracery in attempting to bribe the jury in the case of the Widow Wright vs. the Sutter street Railroad Company, returned a verdict of guilty. Sentence was set for next Thursday. The penalty is from one to ten years' imprisonment.

She Went Back on Him.

SAN JOSE, October 1.—Woolsey Shaw, aged 78, a prominent farmer and orchardist, residing near Berryessa, has filed a complaint charging his wife with having defrauded him of his estate in the sum of $5000, having by undue pursuasions induced him to deed the same to her and afterward selling the estate and preparing to leave him, and prays that the court compel her to return the said premises to him and enjoin her agents and attorneys from all further connections with the estate.

Will Be Well Received.

MONTEREY, October 1.—Everything is being put in readiness at Pacific Grove for the reception of the members of the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T. No pains will be spared to make the visit pleasant for them. An attendance of 500 is expected.

Desirable Deposit.

COLTON, October 1.—The fact has been demonstrated that there is no marble in Glover mountain, but that the stone heretofore called marble is now known to be onyx of different colors. There is a great demand for this stone.

Easily Effected.

COLTON, October 1.—The work of eviction of the settlers on lands heretofore set apart to the Mission Indians has been completed. The reservation is east of Banning, in this county. The settlers offered no resistance.

A Good Showing.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 1.—During the past week 1256 immigrants have reached here from the East, the largest number in any week for several months.

A Leprosy Case.

OAKLAND, October 1.—A case of leprosy was reported to the health office to-day and the authorities will make an investigation.

THE NORTHERN SEAS.

Rescue of a Sole Survivor—A Murderer in Custody.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 1.—The United States revenue cutter Bear arrived here from Ounalaska this evening. She reached Ounalaska from St. Michaels August 24th, and gave Frank Fuller, the murderer of Archbishop Seghers, into the custody of the United States Marshal.

On the same day she seized the British sealing schooner Ada with 1900 skins, and the American schooner Allie J. Alger with 1600. A few days later the American schooner Silvia Handy, with 1700 skins, was seized, and all the vessels were turned over to the United States Marshal at Ounalaska.

The Bear reports the total catch of the whaling fleet up to August 5th as seventy-four whales.

Among the passengers on the cutter was James B. Vincent, the only survivor of thirty-six men on the whaler Napoleon, which was wrecked in the ice in the Arctic, in May, 1885, the particulars of which were published in the Associated Press dispatches a week ago. Since the time of the wreck, until rescued by the Bear, Vincent has been living with a small band of Indians on the Siberian coast.

Reports received a month ago that the Bear was leaking badly seem to have some foundation, as it was found necessary to keep men at the pumps most of the time on the trip from the Arctic. The Bear left the cutter Rush at Ounalaska on August 27th.

PROCLAIMS HIS INNOCENCE.

Had No Intention of Committing Contempt.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 1.—H. H. Lowenthal, attorney and counsel for the firm of Wing Luen & Co., from whose safe papers implicating certain persons in the late jury-fixing cases were taken a week ago, was tried to-day for contempt of court in disregarding a search-warrant issued and endeavoring to obstruct the same by means of a writ of replevin. Lowenthal testified in his own behalf, and when asked by counsel if he caused the issuance of the writ of replevin for the malicious purpose of interfering with a legal process, he replied in the negative and said it was his desire to have the papers placed in the possession of the Sheriff, in order to have some court determine the right of the parties. He further stated that if he knew that the officers were looking for papers that they thought might criminate him and others he would have made no objection to the search. He disclaimed all contempt. When asked why he had Foreman Menzies brought before Judge Boland for contempt, he answered because Menzies had ran away with the papers. The case was then continued till Monday afternoon. All of the papers are now in the possession of the Grand Jury and will be brought into court on that day, and those not mentioned in the search-warrant will be returned to the firm.

WANT THE CASH.

The "Accommodation" Will be Satisfactory.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 1.—Henry Waterhouse, a member of the new House of Nobles of the Hawaiian Kingdom, arrived here from Honolulu to-day, on the steamship Mariposa. He brings with him a communication to be forwarded to the Foreign Office at London in regard to the Hawaiian loan of $2,000,000 subscribed for in London. The communication is signed by W. L. Green, Godfroy Brown, Lorrin A. Thurston and Clarence W. Asliford, members of the Cabinet, and reads as follows: The report published in London papers that the Hawaiian Government had repudiated the English loan was a misstatement of the facts. The new government is and always has been ready to execute any form of bonds for the whole amount wanted and subscribed for, which any competent authority, English or Hawaiian, may decide does not contravene with the terms of the Act authorizing the loans, and it will allow out of that sum all charges which the same authority may decide are authorized by said Acts, copies of which are and have been in the hands of the Hawaiian financial agents in London.

A Murderous Fanatic.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 1.—Advices per steamer Mariposa state that a religious fanatic named Wadham Wyndham killed his wife and three children at Inverell, New South Wales, on August 28. Soon after midnight he attacked his family, crushing in the head of his wife with a stone and butchering his children with knives and a carving fork. The coroner's jury returned a verdict charging Wyndham with wilful murder.

Merit Rewarded.

SACRAMENTO, October 1.—Governor Waterman has tendered the appointment of engineer of the State Printing Office to C. McL. Stoneman, son of ex-Governor Stoneman.

A DISMAL STORY.

Recent Reports Fully Substantiated.

NEW YORK, October 1.—Robert B. Porter, the statistician and tariff writer, has returned from a visit to Ireland, where he left matters in about as bad shape as the newspaper accounts have represented them to be. He addressed a meeting at Mitchelstown just before O'Brien's arrest, and was shadowed by the constabulary for his temerity. They saw American fire in his eye, and did not disturb him, however. He says Ireland is police-ridden. Mitchelstown, for instance, is a peaceful village of 2000 people. There was only one arrest there for crime last year, and only two in three years. Yet 100 constables are stationed there, at an expense of $40,000 a year. What is still worse is that the potato crop is poor, and there is no prospect of better times. Recent statistics show that one out of every ten people in Ireland has received aid of some kind in the last year, and that in at least six provinces more than half the people have had to ask police aid.

EASTERN NEWS.

Grand Military Pageant Projected.

GRAVE CHARGES PREFERRED.

Lodges of Southern Masons Accused of Committing Capital Crimes.

Associated Press Dispatches to the HERALD.

CHICAGO, October 1.—Preparations are nearly completed for the formal opening on Monday of the first really international military encampment ever held in the United States. The prospects are that it will be a decided success. The regular army will be represented by detachments of infantry, cavalry and artillery, with navy blue-jackets and marines from the United States steamer Michigan, and the militia of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois and Kentucky will have battalion or full regimental representation. Besides these there will be fifty or sixty single companies of militia to swell the infantry list. The cavalry display promises to be a fine one, some of the crack troopers of the country being on the way here now.

STARTLING ACCUSATION.

Colored Masons Charged With Murder.

NEW ORLEANS, October 1.—A Picayune special from Greenwood, Miss., says that warrants have been issued for the arrest of fifteen colored Masons, on a charge of murdering a man named Taylor. Several murders of a mysterious nature have occurred near there in the past two years, and the whites claimed that the negro Masonic Order made it a practice to avenge the death or injury of any of their craft. Some time ago a negro was killed in a fight by Harry Taylor, and a few days afterwards Taylor's body was found in the river. An investigation was instituted and the result was a verdict of the jury that the man was murdered by members of the negro Masonic lodges at Dry Bayou and Shell Mound, and their arrest was recommended. Considerable excitement prevails.

UNDER NEW RULES.

What was Done on the Diamond Yesterday.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 1.—The new rules were given a first trial in a schedule game to-day between the Altas and Greenhood & Morans. The latter club won by a score of 7 to 4, after a close and interesting game. The public generally were somewhat at sea for a time, but soon appreciated the fact that it took more men to play the game than simply the pitcher and catcher. Cahill, late of the Indianapolis team, occupied the box for the Capital City boys, but Borchers struck out more men, and had less hits scored against him than the Indianian.

THE PHILLIES' SUCCESS.

PHILADELPHIA, October 1.—When the two ball teams came on the grounds for to-day's game the men looked commendably clean. When the game was over the eighteen athletes retired to their club house and hotel covered with mud from head to foot. The fielding of both teams was excellent, considering the wretched condition of the ground. Conway was badly punished by the home players. The score stood: Philadelphia 13, Boston 4.

OTHER EVENTS.

INDIANAPOLIS, October 1.—Chicago, 5: Indianapolis, 4.

WASHINGTON, October 1.—New York, 3; Washington, 3. Game called on account of darkness.

PITTSBURG, October 1.—Detroit, 6; Pittsburg, 10.

CINCINNATI, October 1.—Cincinnati, 10; St. Louis, 2.

DANGEROUS DISEASE.

Measures for Its Subjection Proposed.

WASHINGTON, October 1.—The Secretary of the Interior has received, through the Commissioner of Agriculture, a communication from Governor Leslie, of Montana, transmitting a report from the veterinary surgeon of that Territory relating to the disease known as glanders existing among horses within the Crow reservation, and also a letter from Indian Agent Williams on the same subject. The veterinarian, after investigation, is fully satisfied that the disease prevails to a limited extent among the horses on the reservation, and says he regards it as most important that steps should be taken to stamp out the disease while in its incipiency. The Commissioner of Agriculture recommends that, as its bureau of animal industry has no jurisdiction within the reservation the Interior Department will take such steps as are necessary to cause the destruction of affected horses, in order to prevent the spread of the disease and to protect the lives of people, as well as of animals, of adjoining States and Territories.

A Colliery Explosion.

ASHLAND, PA., October 1.—Three men and two boys were suffocated and thirteen others overcome by gas this afternoon in the Bost colliery. A pillar gave way, bringiug with it the gas. Men in the neighboring breast heard the tremendous rush of air, and escaped by fleeing to the bottom of the slope. It is feared that some of those overcome by the gas will die.

A Labor Champion Dead.

PITTSBURG, October 1.—Thomas A. Armstrong, editor and proprietor of the National Labor Tribune, a leading labor journal, died this evening from the effects of a wound received in the late war.

Will Make Another Effort.

GLASGOW, October 1.—Mr. Muir, of Dumbarton, owner of the yacht Mabel, has determined to build a cutter to compete for America's cup next year unless Mr. Bell again challenges for it.

A Negro Lynched.

NACOGDOCHES, Texar, October 1—Last night a mob battered down the jail door, took out the negro murderer, Joe Adams, and hung him.

YESTERDAY'S RACES.

Good Work Performed by Eastern Flyers.

BROOKLYN, October 1.—It is raining hard and the track is heavy.

The first race, three-quarters of a mile, six starters—Freedom won, H. Russell second, Pericles third. Time, 1:17½.

Second race, one and three-sixteenth miles, four starters—Swift won, Queen Elizabeth second, Richmond third. Time, 2:08.

Third race, three-quarters of a mile—Omaha won, George Oyster second, Specialty third. Time, 1:17¼.

Fourth race, one and one-eighth miles, seven starters—Banbury won, Favor second, Hanover third. Time, 1:57½.

Fifth race, three-fourths mile dash, three starters—My Own won, Monmouth second, Joe Clark third; time, 1:15¼.

Sixth race, one and one-fifth miles, six starters—Queen Bess won, Joe Mitchell second, Belmont third; time, 2 minutes.

TO-MORROW'S ENTRIES.

The HERALD's special service contributes the following as the programme for to-morrow at Clifton:

First race, five-eighths mile—Mamie B, 100; Warrantee, 100; Silver Star, 100; Tunis, 100; Falsenote, 100; El Mahdi, 100; Fred Davis, 100; Catherine M, 100; Lucy Johnson, 100; Gilmore, 100; Peacock, 100; Rosetta, 100; Cedar Bluff, 100; Falsehood, 100; Glenalmond, 100; Bright Eyes, 100; Burgundia, 100.

Second race, selling, one and one-eighth miles—Rob Roy, 94; Amber, 94; F. Mullins, 94; Volo, 94; Compensation, 94; Vindex, 94; Byron Cross, 90; King George, 92.

Third race, selling, one mile—Treasurer, 115; Ivanhoe, 105; Wayward, 105; Bauero, 105; Pilot, 105; Charley May, 104; Charley Russell, 102; Commander, 100; Beyhead, 100; Miss Daly, 100; Brier, 100; Souvenir, 100.

Fifth race, five-eighths of a mile—Eolite, 115; Lucky Seven, 115; Cochecо, 111; Ivanhoe, 110; Catskill, 109; Auditor, 105; Glenn, 104; Queen, 104; Hapnafilly, 102.

New Quarters Suggested.

WASHINGTON, October 1.—The Secretary of the Interior has under consideration a recommendation made by Colonel George Gibson of the Fifth Infantry, commanding the military post at Fort Keogh, Mont., that the remnant of the northern Cheyenne band of Indians now living at Pine Ridge agency on the Sioux reservation, in Dakota, be permanently removed to Tongue river agency in Montana, where a large part of the tribe has been located since 1882. The question in this connection is whether there is in the Tongue reservation a sufficient quantity of land to supply the needs of all under the severalty act.

Flattering Prospects.

NEW YORK, October 1.—A special from Philadelphia says that a cable dispatch was received in that city yesterday from Robert Garratt, in which it was stated that very satisfactory negotiations have been made for the future welfare of both the railroad and telegraph companies, and Garratt added that a syndicate, who are backing the Baltimore and Ohio, are well pleased with its prospects. The dispatch closed by denying the rumors that have been afloat to the effect that the telegraph company was to be gobbled up by the Western Union or sold to some other syndicate.

Reconciliation Effected.

NEW YORK, October 1.—The animosities excited among the Congregational churches of Brooklyn, which led to the banishment of Plymouth Church from local fellowship during the Beecher trial, promise to subside. Some of the churches who took a hostile stand toward Plymouth Church have relented, and a movement to bring them again into the council has been gladly welcomed by the seceders. There seems to be no doubt that the churches will again be united, every one of them extending full sympathy and fellowship to Plymouth Church.

Improved Telegraph Facilities.

PASO ROBLES, October 1.—Colonel R. C. Clowry, Vice-President of the Western Union Telegraph Company, arrived here on a special train to-day with a party of other officials. They are to make arrangements for putting through a local and through line of copper wire from Kansas City to San Francisco by way of Los Angeles, by the Southern Pacific route. They have prospected along the coast line as far as Templeton, and will return to San Francisco to-morrow.

Public Debt Statement.

WASHINGTON, October 1.—Following is a recapulition of the public debt statement, issued to-day: Interest bearing debt—principal, $1,047,114,400; interest, $11,415,570; total, $1,058,530,000. Debt on which interest has ceased since maturity—principal, $3,739,900; interest, $184,430; total, $3,924,600. Debt bearing no interest—principal, $12,556,580; interest prepaid and not accrued, $1,092,990. Total debt—principal, $1,663,410,960; interest, $12,693,000; total, $1,646,103,950.

A Deadly Trap.

DETROIT, October 1.—The "English Kitchen," a cheap lodging-house on Jefferson avenue, caught fire early this morning. Ten lodgers were imprisoned in an upper story, seven of whom were rescued with but slight injuries. One was burned almost beyond recognition and died from suffocation, and a third, although rescued alive, cannot live.

A Crank's Freak.

MACON, Ill., October 1.—"Old Bill Watson" is well known all over this part of the State as the man who made his own coffin. He says the shop-made coffins are too flimsy, and has made his coffin of inch-and-a-quarter stuff. He is a Mexican war veteran, 73 years old, and was recently allowed a pension. His wife is much younger and doesn't seem to mind the coffin being in the house.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

Enthusiastically Received at all Quarters.

HIS GOOD LUCK CONTINUES.

Popularity of Mrs. Cleveland Indicated—A Cordial Greeting Extended.

[Associated Press Dispatches to the Herald.]

INDIANAPOLIS, October 1.—Daybreak this morning found the President's train in Ohio, about two hours west of Columbus.

MRS. CLEVELAND.

BRADFORD JUNCTION, October 1.—At 7 o'clock the President made his first appearance, and greeted a little crowd of a hundred or more, which had gathered about the car, with a hearty "Good morning."

"We would also like to see your wife," said one of the crowd.

"That is impossible now," replied the President. "She has a hard day's task before her, and is resting."

"Well, we are right glad to see you, sir," said the spokesman of the crowd.

"I thank you for that," rejoined the President; "but of the two, I expect you would prefer to see Mrs. Cleveland."

At Richmond, Ind., half an acre of solid humanity awaited the train. A five-minute stop was spent in handshaking. The President remained upon the platform of the car, grasping the hands stretched up to him. Breakfast was the only incident of the run from Richmond to Indianapolis. The day was cool, but promised to be fair.

HIS PROVERBIAL LUCK.

INDIANAPOLIS, October 1.—Day dawned here in a drizzle and the outlook for the reception was gloomy enough, but the President's good luck brought him a burst of sunshine as the procession moved. There was a large attendance of military and other local organizations, including the Hendricks club, which acted as the President's escort. The President, Mrs. Cleveland and ex-Senator McDonald rode in a carriage drawn by eight gray horses. The progress of the vehicle was marked by cheers. Hats were waved and handkerchiefs fluttered from every window, and the carriage was the chief object of interest.

ENTHUSIASM MANIFESTED.

The crowd swept into the street, making two great streams of people flowing down behind the escorting clubs. Men, women with babies in arms, and children were undeterred by the muddy condition of the streets, and yet there was nothing motley in the mass. It was well-mannered, cordial and respectful.

A FEELING TRIBUTE.

Upon arriving at the State House a formal reception was tendered the President and an address of welcome delivered by Governor Gray. The President responded and congratulated the people upon their beautiful and prosperous city. He also made a touching allusion to the late Vice-President Hendricks.

THE PRESIDENT PLEASED.

TERRE HAUTE, October 1.—The train left Indianapolis a half-hour late, but time was made up before reaching Terre Haute. The President and Mrs. Cleveland were delighted with the warmth of their reception and the general appearance of the town. The stop at Indianapolis proved a relief to the fatigue and monotony inevitable to a thirty-hour ride. Among mementoes of the visit brought away by the distinguished guests was a Waterbury watch, which was presented by some one at the reception in the capitol, engraved, "To Grover Cleveland, with regards of a traveling salesman." At Greencastle besides the crowd of citizens was a long train of returning G. A. R. men, who stood upon the siding, and the occupants cheered and waved their salutes.

A GENTLE PERSUADER.

The train left Terra Haute fifty-six minutes late. On the way to the station a middle-aged enthusiast grabbed the rear of the President's carriage and resisted all endeavors to make him let go. Two or three of the mounted escort tried to ride him down, but he cursed them savagely and refused to budge. Finally Mrs. Cleveland turned to him and said "Please let go," and the fellow dropped and slunk away in the darkness.

The throng, though turbulent and wildly demonstrative, was harmless and good-natured. During the absence of the excursionists from the train considerable difficulty was experienced by railroad people in protecting it from a mob of vandals who remained at the station. There were bonfires, torches and Chinese lanterns displayed and brass band serenades at nearly all the stations between Terre Haute and St. Louis. It was not intended that any stops should be made but when the locomotive seemed to need water. Whenever a stop was made the multitude gathered.

At Effingham, Ill., a platform gave way and thirty or forty people disappeared. Their fall was not more than two or three feet, and so far as learned no one was hurt.

A GRACEFUL TRIBUTE.

At Terre Haute station a crowd of several thousand had assembled. The President was received by Senator Voorhees, Ex-Secretary of the Navy Thompson and the committee, and with his companions was driven to the Normal School building, in front of which a stand had been erected. The great square contained probably 20,000 people. Senator Voorhees called the assemblage to order and announced Hon. Richard Thompson, Ex-Secretary of the Navy, who welcomed the President to Terre Haute. The President replied briefly, to this effect: "Having travelled now through the State of Indiana, and seen something of its fertility and wealth, and a little of its people, it seems fitting as we leave its borders that we should, after the manner of parting guests, express the pleasure which our brief visit to your State has afforded us. And I am told, too, that Terre Haute is one of the most beautiful cities of which Indiana can boast. This fact causes me to regret that I have so little opportunity now to see it. As this particular neighborhood forms the richest portion of this very rich and productive State is a cause of congratulation which you doubtless fully appreciate, but of all your products perhaps the most audibly known is the "Tall Sycamore of the Wabash," for this place has been pretty well advertised as the home of that particular lofty tree. During the last two and a half years I have become somewhat acquainted with the sycamore, and have made up my mind that it has height and size enough for any locality or purpose." The President further spoke in praise of the city and returned thanks for his kind greeting. At the conclusion of the speeches the visitors were hurried to the train as soon as they could be freed from the surrounding multitudes, and started for St. Louis.

GERMANY'S GRASP.

Probable Subjugation of the Samoan Dynasty.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 1.—The steamship Mariposa brings moderately complete mail advices from New Zealand respecting the action of the German men-of-war and practical seizure in the name of the German Government, of the Samoan group of islands. The four German men-of-war lying at Apia landed 1300 troops and marines on August 25th and immediately proclaimed Tamasese King of Samoa. The American and British consuls immediately published the following proclamation:

"Whereas, The government of Germany has this day proclaimed Tamasese King of Samoa, now, therefore, we, the undersigned representatives of the United States of America and of Great Britain, hereby give notice that we and our governments do not and never have recognized Tamasese as King of Samoa, but continue as heretofore to recognize Malietoa. We advise the Samoans to submit quietly and not to fight, whatever the provocation, but to await peaceably the result of deliberations now in progress, which alone can determine the future of Samoa."

The proclamation is dated at Apia, August 25th, and signed by Harold Marsh Sewell, Consul-General of the United States, and W. H. Wilson, British pro-Consul.

New Zealand advices from Apia are to the effect that a serious disturbance on the islands was only a question of time and that the hostility between the Germans and the loyal natives was increasing.

INJUSTICE ASSERTED.

The German settlers constantly complain of thefts committed by the natives, while the natives complain of the injustice of the Germans in land transactions. King Malietoa had complained to the English and Americans of the conduct of Germans and the German Consul is said to have several times menaced Malietoa with the possible elevation of a rival chief, which was actually done, as already related. The immediate provocation which led to the German action was owing to an occurrance growing out of the celebration of the Emperor of Germany's birthday. It is declared by New Zealand papers that a number of Germans became intoxicated and handled some of the natives roughly. A free fight ensued. The affair, however, passed over. Afterwards the German commander sent to King Malietoa, demanding $13,000 as damages for injuries done to the Germans, $1000 being included as a personal fine upon the King. The damages were explained to be on account of injuries to German plantations and robberies by natives. King Malietoa protested against making him liable for acts done by the natives under such circumstances. He asked time to consider, but the next day the Germans landed and posted the following proclamation.

WAR PROCLAIMED.

To the Citizens of Apia:—By order of His Majesty the Emperor of Germany, war has been declared against Chief Malietoa. The neutrality of the municipal district will be respected as long as the securjty of the German troops is not endangered by any agitation within the municipal district. I call on the inhabitants to assist me in the maintenance of peace and good order in Apia.

HENSULT,
Commodore and Commander of the German squadron.

The British and American subjects at once sought the protection of their respective flags, and a joint circular was then promulgated by the American and British consuls.

Malietoa not only denies the authority of the Germans to set up a king in his stead, but has threatened to fight for his rights.

WILL DEFEND THEIR HOMES.

At the latest date, the ship haying sailed from Apia September 2d, he was mustering 1300 men, and active hostilities were expected from day to day. The Samoans are declared to be indifferently armed, and can make no serious show against the Germans. The New Zealand newspapers' comment is bitter against the Germans, looking upon their action as a practical annexation, despite the understanding with the United States and Great Britain.

APATHY APPARENT.

W. B. Waller and S. B. Marr, both Americans, came on the steamship Mariposa to-day, having left the Samoan Islands September 13th, and bringing the very latest intelligence from there. They relate that two additional German men-of-war had arrived at Apia, and that two British men-of-war, the Opal and Diamond, had also appeared at that port. The Germans had landed in all 3100 soldiers and marines. Mr. Waller said that Consul-General Sewell said to him the day before he left that he could only express surprise at the failure of the United States Government to take any action in view of the breaking of the treaty rights by Germany.

Combination Effected.

NEW YORK, October 1.—By the terms of agreement between the Northern Pacific and the Union Pacific, the Northern Pacific joins the Union Pacific in a guarantee of dividends and charges on Oregon Navigation securities, the Union Pacific paying 3 per cent. and the Northern Pacific 3 per cent. of the guaranteed dividend of 6 per cent. on the Oregon Navigation stocks.

CLOSING SCENES.

The Grand Army Evacuating St. Louis.

AN UNPLEASANT EPISODE.

The Monument to General Logan Assured—Western Representatives Honored.

[Associated Press Dispatches to the HERALD.]

ST. LOUIS, October 1.—The feature of yesterday was the great rush to see the California exhibit, and the doors had to be closed in the middle of the afternoon. There is an unpleasant friction existing between the comrades recognizing the Department of California as the only G. A. R. State organization, and those who belong to the Southern California brigade. The two organizations have different headquarters, one at the Laclede and the other at Armory Hall. The posts belonging to the Southern brigade elected General Vandever as their commander, whereas the staff of the State delegation distinctly repudiate any leader except Department Commander Salomon. The latter has adopted a quiet but firm attitude, and in his orders has included the whole State. He also refused to allow the State to be represented in two sections when the Californians intend parading.

Finally the over-zealous comrades, seeing that they were wrong, and had no legal existence under the Grand Army rules, gave the post of honor at the banquet to Commander Salomon. General Vandever left Thursday night for his home in San Buenaventura, and this probably settles the matter. The Southern California brigade took the very unusual course of printing a paper without the name of the Department Commander. This gentleman has responded by issuing an officially-printed roster of the members here from the Department of California. This list is headed in the usual manner by the department officers, and the unauthorized Southern list is included in it.

THE LOGAN MONUMENT.

The committee on the Logan monument reported that a fund had been established for the erection of an equestrian statue at Washington, and on the adoption of the report Governor Alger, of Michigan, and George G. Lemon, of New York, each subscribed $1000 to the fund.

ADJOURNED.

The Encampment adjourned sine die last night, and a great many of the delegates have left the city. A grand ball was given to the delegates and officers of the Encampment at the Lindell Hotel. Covers for 700 persons were laid and the menu was of the finest. The banquet hall was gorgeously decorated. Speeches were made by Hannibal Hamlin, of Maine, Bishop Fellows, of Chicago, and other distinguished visitors

WESTERN MEMBERS RECOGNIZED.

ST. LOUIS, October 1.—The new National Council of Administration of the G. A. R. includes the following among its thirty members: Cecil A. Dean, Denver; J. A. Motley, Portland, Or.; A. W. Barrett, Los Angeles, Cal.; P. R. Dolman, Butte, M. T.; O. Summer, Portland, Or.; James S. Purdy, Santa Fe, N. M.; Charles M. Holton, North Tehama, W. T.; T. C. Bailey, Salt Lake. The new President of the Woman's Relief Corps is Mrs. Hampton, of Michigan.

A GENEROUS BEQUEST.

ST. LOUIS, October 1.—The G. A. R. Encampment has accepted the Capron-Seaman-Fox proposition for a soldiers' home in Mission Valley, and has appointed N. D. Hamilton trustee. The project is as follows: Messrs. Capron, Seaman and Fox have purchased and set aside 4200 acres of land, which is to be subdivided and cut up into blocks and lots and placed upon the market. The necessary land for the erection of the building and adjoining grounds for the home is reserved, and two-thirds of the funds received from the sale of lots in the tract are to be donated to the construction of the building and maintaining it as a home for disabled soldiers and sailors of the Pacific Coast. It is expected, however, that the Board of Managers of the National Home will recommend that the appropriation made by Congress be added to the donation and the National Home be located there.

THE NEW OFFICERS.

The Women's Relief Corps have elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Mrs. Emma I. Hampton, of Detroit, Mich., National President; Mrs. Cora Day Young, of Toledo, Ohio, Senior Vice-President; Mrs. Mary J. Ingraham, of New Jersey, Junior Vice-President; Mrs. Sarah C. Nichols, of Auburn, New York, Instituting and Installing Officer.

Favorable Crop Prospects.

WINNEPEG, October 1.—Crops in Manitoba this year, according to statistical reports, exceed all estimates. The Canadian Pacific Railway will be utterly inadequate to move the crop in many sections. The yield of wheat has been 35 bushels to the acre—in many places an average of about 30 bushels. This would make 10,000,000 bushels available for export if it could be moved. One million bushels of potatoes can also be had for export.

Their Last Chance.

CHICAGO, October 1.—The attorney for the condemned anarchists to-day began the preparation of a petition to the Supreme Court of the United States for a writ of error. Captain Black and Mr. Solomon are working on a copy of the record in the State Attorney's office, while the clerk of the court at Ottawa is, with the aid of many type-writers, preparing a transcript of the record.

A Bank Failure.

CLEVELAND, October 1.—Great excitement prevailed at Belleview on account of the failure of the Belleview bank, which was caused by poor investments and bad management. The liabilities are about $100,000, but the depositors will lose nothing.

PUBLIC WORKS.

Improvements of Streets Which Are Contemplated.

The Board of Public Works me yesterday and transacted the follow-t ing business:

On petion of B. S. Hoyt et al., to have grade of Union avenue established, between Diamond and Ocean View streets, and of Ocean View street, from Union to the east line of division A of lot 4, recommended the same be granted, and the City Surveyor be instructed to establish the same.

On petition of Edward Records et al., for an amended franchise, ask for further time.

Recommended that the grade of Hope street, between Sixth street and Normal School, be accepted.

On protest of A. P. McIntosh et al., against the bid of $4.40 for grading Virgin street, recommended that the same be referred to the City Surveyor for estimate.

On petition of E. C. Shipley et al., to have Kinney street graded, recommended that the same be granted and the City Attorney be instructed to draft resolutions accordingly.

On petition of R. C. Carlton et al., to have Flower street graded, between Pico and Washingotn streets, recommended that the property owners be allowed to do their own grading, provided they grade entire blocks.

On petition of H. Bixel, to have Arnold street graded, from Lucas avenue to Lafayette street, recommended the same be denied, as the whole street should be graded under the same contract.

On application of John H. Bryan to be allowed to grade a portion of Flower street, recommended that the same be referred to the City Attorney.

On application of John H. Bryan to be allowed to grade Hope street in front of his property, recommended that the same be referred to the City Attorney.

On petition of C. Ganahl to do his own grading on Main street from Alameda to Kuhrts street, recommended that the same be granted, provided petitioners grade entire blocks in accordance with specifications.

On petition of Hammel & Denker to have grade of Los Angeles street established between Ninth and Eleventh and also the grade of Tenth street, recommended the that same be granted and the City Surveyor instructed to establish same.

On petition of F. C. Howes to be allowed to grade Royal and Dane streets in front of his property, recommended that the same be granted provided the entire block be graded.

In regard to protest of the property owner on Hayes street between Hoff and Downey avenue, against the steam railroad, report that the franchise has already been denied.

In regard to the protest of citizens against the tearing up of their pipes in the public streets, states that an order had been passed notifying the company of the rule in regard to the matter.

Recommended that a new commission be appointed to settle the grade of Court House and Bunker Hill streets, and suggest that E. T. Wright be appointed on behalf of the city.

In regard to the protest of M. S. & A. P. R. R., recommended that the same be referred to the City Attorney.

On petition of Lanfranco estate for permission to pave Court street, recommended the same be granted, provided the trustees comply with the regular city specifications for ashphalt pavement and provided entire width is paved.

On petition of John McLaughlin et al to have Castelar street paved between Vignes and College streets, recommended that the same be granted and the City Attorney instructed to draft resolutions accordingly.

On petition of Jesse Yarnell to have grade of Merrill street between Diamond street and Ocean View Avenue established, recommended that the City Surveyor be instructed to establish the grade.

In regard to the communication from the Bituminous Rock Company, recommended that no change be made in the specifications.

On petition of J. B. Banning et al to have the roadway of Ninth street from Pearl street, west to the city line made 50 feet wide, recommended that the same be granted, provided the property owners arrange with contractor for change in paving, and provided that the petitioners move back the obstructions so as to make ten feet sidewalks.

Recommended that the City Surveyor be instructed to establish the grade of Boyle avenue.

In regard to the petition of Southern Pacific Railroad Company, asking permission for a change of track on Alameda street, ask further time and recommended that the company be requested to furnish map to show the locality of the tracks.

On petition of G. A. Armot, recommended that the same be denied and the City Surveyor instructed to make estimate of the work.

Recommended that the protest of Mary H. Banning be referred to the City Surveyor.

The Board then adjourned.

Sausal Redondo.

The following well-known gentlemen went yesterday to examine the beautiful beach and fine hotel site at Sausal Redondo: C. W. Smith, Vice-President of the A., T. and S. F. Railway Company, Judge A. Brunson, counsel for that corporation, D. Freeman, Judge Charles Silent, N. R. Vail, Dan McFarland and Colonel Fred T. Perris, Chief Engineer of the Atchison system in California.

The party went down in the elegant private car of the Vice-President and were handsomely entertained by Mr. Freeman in his elegant manner at Centinela. They drove over to the beach and found it a grand spot for a hotel and watering place. It is stated that all the party were greatly pleased with the place and that a railway track will be laid very shortly to the hotel site, and the finest hotel in Los Angeles county will soon ornament the bluff.

Burned His Eyes.

Geo. Hoyt and an Italian, both in the employ of Mr. Weinshank, a plumber, of 127 South Spring street, were repairing a fire hydrant near the Cape Horn, the junction of Alameda and Upper Main streets, and at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon they had ocasion to use molten lead. There was some water in the hydrant which caused the lead to explode, a portion going in Hoyt's eyes. The Italian drove Hoyt to the plumber shop immediately, where he received medical assistance.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

The Court House to be Built of Stone.

In re La Don School District, special tax argument by Messrs. White and and District Attorney Harrison; final decision to be rendered October 3d.

In re Pico and Ranchito bridges, on motion of Supervisor Macy, the bond of California Bridge Co. approved and clerk directed to return check.

On motion of Supervisor Martin, the clerk was directed to return all checks of bidders except that of W. E. Brady. Carried.

On motion of Supervisor Martin, the contract and bond for building Court House was referred to S. M. White, he to report to the Board at 10 A. M., October 3, 1887.

Adjourned until 10 A. M. Monday.

CHAUTAUQUA ASSEMBLY.

Endowment Fund of $100,000 and a Valuable Site.

By a vote of its Board of Trustees, approved by its Directors, the Chautauqua Assembly of Southern California has decided to remove from Long Beach to Redondo Beach.

The Redondo Beach Company has donated to the Assembly spacious and beautiful grounds for the erection, for next season's use, of an Assembly pavilion and lecture room, to cost at least $40,000. The pavilion will seat 5000 people.

An endowment fund of $100,000 has been provided for. Every arrangement will be made to make the coming season at Redondo Beach one of unusual brilliancy and success. The best lecturers obtainable will be secured, as ample funds for the purpose have been guaranteed.

The Chautauqua Society embraces the best and most intelligent people. It has a membership of 150,000 in the United States, and over 5000 in Southern California. The attendance at the different lectures and meetings at Long Beach the past summer exceeded 70,000.

September Arrests.

The following arrests were made during September by the police: Assault to kill 5, assault with deadly weapon 4, battery 2, fighting 25, drunk 194, gambling 33, petty larceny 7, grand larceny 4, prostitution 14, visiting houses of prostitution 8, burglary 3, violation of city ordinance 36, vagrancy 8, medical treatment 13, on suspicion 2, carrying weapons 7, horses left on street 18, drunk to sober 31, lodgers 60, disturbing peace 6, embezzlement 1, witness 4, misdemeanor 1, resisting officer 1, indecent exposure 3, soliciting 10, crime against nature 1, obtaining money under false pretense 1, cruelty to children 1, cruelty to animals 1. Total for month, 508. Convicted in city court 249, turned over to county authorities, 70, cases continued 23.

McCauley Discharged.

H. L. McCauley, the defaulting clerk of the A. T. & S. F. railroad, was brought before Justice Taney yesterday afternoon. Geo. M. Holton, Esq., appearing for the railroad company, stated that they had no wish to further prosecute Mr. McCauley. Judge Harrison, of the District Attorney's office, said that there was no complaint against the prisoner, and that the railroad people had been reimbursed for their loss. Under these circumstances he did not see that McCauley could be held. Judge Fitzgerald moved for the discharge of his client, and Judge Taney ordered his release.

A New Fruit Company.

A new fruit canning company has been organized in this city by Messrs. R. A. Ling, E. Germain, Porter Brothers, Seymour & Jonhson, H. Jevne, C. E. Day, S. J. Mathes, Barton S. Hayes, G. W. Tubbs and S. J. Peck, capital stock $75,000, all subscribed. The works will be located on the east side of the river near the S. P. railway, from which line a railway track will be laid to the works. The establishment will put up all kinds of fruit and vegetables for distant markets. A meeting for the election of officers will be held at the Board of Trade on Tuesday night.

The G. A. R. Illustrated Herald.

This office is now well supplied with the splendid G. A. R. edition of the Illustrated Herald. It is superbly adorned pictorially, and printed in the very best style known to the art. The reading matter is all about Southern California, her climate, resources and other attractions. This is the best publication extant to send to friends in the East who desire to know about this section. It is sold at the low price of 15 cents per copy.

Plenty of Room.

The best informed carpenters and builders estimate that there are 600 buildings in course of erection and nearing completion in this city at the present time. They will contain from four rooms to one hundred rooms each, making at least six thousand rooms being made ready for guests in Los Angeles, with six thousand more under contract. That does not look as if visitors, like the Son of Man, would have no place to lay their heads. On the contrary, there is room and a welcome for all.

Feast of Tabernacles.

This festival in memory of the protection of the Israelites in the wilderness and during mediæval persecutions, will be celebrated in the synagogue on Fort street this evening, at 6:30, and to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock. Dr. Schreiber, the Rabbi, will lecture on Monday in English. Subject: "Israel in the Desert." All welcome.

Marriage Licenses.

The following named persons were yesterday granted licenses to wed: O. Wilson to A. Elsden, R. S. Battelle to W. Kelly, L. L. Leversidge to I. A. Heaton, N. M. Kilgore to S. P. Gran.

BURBANK.

The Beautiful Suburb of Los Angeles.

A HERALD reporter was greatly surprised a few days since, when traveling up the San Fernando valley, to find a large tract of several thousand acres of rich sandy loam within six miles of Los Angeles open to purchasers at only $300 per acre. This land was formerly owned by Dr. Burbank, and from it, in the past, he has reaped thousands of tons of grain every year without irrigation. But owing to its fine location, the richness of its soil, and its adaptability to fruit and vine culture, a syndicate was formed last spring to place it upon the market in small tracts, to suit the purchasers. This syndicate is known as the Providencia Land, Water and Development Company, and its head office is at No. 12 South Spring street, this city. It is ditching and laying pipes to every subdivision of its tract. It has several large reservoirs, besides an abundance of spring water, and it guarantees an ample supply of water to every purchaser of villa property or town lots.

This company's property is located across and near the center of the valley, which has long been noted as one of the most fertile valleys in Southern California. No scale or mold has ever attacked the citrus fruit of this valley, and there are in it several of the largest orange orchards in the county, from one of which—Mr. Crow's—was sold last year $15,000 worth of oranges.

Near the center of the company's tract, which consists of 17,000 acres, is the suburban village of Burbank. And here it seems as if nature has conspired to lend every attribute to invigorate the mind and body and charm the eye. The balmy ocean breeze robbed of its dampness by passing over the intervening lands paints the rosy glow of a maiden's blush upon every cheek it fans; the evenness of the temperature through day and night, and all the year, gives buoyancy of spirit and elasticity of step to the invalid and enervated; the scenery surpasses in picturesqueness many sights in Europe which thousands, yearly, cross the Atlantic ocean to view. From here as the panorama of view unrolls, one sees a fertile valley dotted with beautiful cottages, around which cluster flowers more fragrant and beautiful than those of Turkey, and here, too, grow oranges sweeter than those of Cyprus, peaches finer in flavor than those of Delaware, pears more luscious than those of Maryland, and grapes that vie in beauty and excellence with those that cling to vines which creep and trail along the castled Rhine. Over the mountains the forest has thrown an emerald vale, and along the valley's margin threads a silver stream. In the distance the city's domes and spires stand out in bold relief, and over all is an ever blue sky so purely clear that at night the stars seem strangely near.

To nature's charms art has added all the modern conveniences that heart could desire. Here is a magnificent hotel, where the epicurean and the hungry and weary alike can find food and rest; three standard guage railroads will connect Burbank with Los Angeles, over which will run sixteen passenger trains each day. The business man, weary of his day's toil in the city, can reach his quiet home in this beautiful, pleasant and healthful suburban valley in a fifteen-minute ride. A railroad will also be completed in the near future Burbank to the coast. Several hundred acres of the foot-hill land is being turned into a magnificent park, in which will be beautiful shade trees, flowers, fountains, excellent driveways and a race course.

To see Burbank and its surrounding acre property, is to fall in love with their many attractions; to investigate their advantages will prompt one to invest; to invest in lots in Burbank, or in villa property surrounding it, will insure the investor health, wealth and happiness. The wise home-seekers will go and see Burbank, will fall in love with it, will investigate, will invest and will be blest with all the enjoyments of life.

THE UNITED STATES HOTEL.

A Great Acquisition to Los Angeles.

The New United States Hotel has just opened. The proprietor, J. F. Woodward, has spared no expense to make this hotel one of the very best in the city. Everything about it is new and of the finest order. As one ascends to register the electric light at the head of the stairway shows the guest what exquisite taste Mr. Woodward has shown and how well he studies the comforts of his boarders. Along the spacious hallway we turn to the left and enter the reception room, which is magnificently furnished. Sitting at a thousand dollar Weber piano was one of the lady guests, who played charmingly. Opening into this handsome furnished parlor was a room though not quite as large or as gorgeously furnished, was cosiness personified. It was the "Library." Here some of the guests had already assembled and were talking of the grandure of the hotel. Coming from the library or reading room we enter a large hallway lit up with gas chandeliers and we see the different bedroom suites. We could imagine we were at the Palace or Baldwin's — they equal either. With marble-top furniture (cherry and walnut dressing), stationary washstands, hot and cold water; with one of the softest beds one would wish to lay upon, you will have everything desirable, like a first-class hotel should be. The kitchen is like a new pin and is under the hands of one of the best chef's, if not the best, on the coast. Coming back to the sleeping departments we saw the electric fire alarm bells work, and we think they are the best in use. Every room in the house has one of these, and in case of fire this is the easiest hotel we ever saw to get out of without injury, having three outlets besides fire-escapes. Going to the main hall we arrive at the dining room. Mr. Woodward has a knack of making everything look bright and cheerful. It reminds one of what real comfort is. Our genial host does not forget the inner man and one has but to try a dinner here and he will most assuredly call again. Going back to the parlor we rested upon one of the most magnificent pieces of furniture we have seen for a long time, admiring the handsome mirrors and furniture of all kinds and description. We all thought what a happy and homelike time we would have if we concluded to stay with mine host. To think of having the very best cusine, sleeping in rooms and beds surrounded by all new and exquisite furniture, superier to the best hotels in Southern California, at a far less figure than they charge. One could hardly believe it. The location being on the main thoroughfare, in the heart of the city, it really seemed odd, but so it is. This hotel is on Main street, two doors from Requena, in the Mesmer's mammoth block. It used to be the old United States Hotel, the largest next to the Nadeau in the city. It was torn down and rebuilt, and is now supposed to be the largest block in Los Angeles.

Vale Confrere.

Last night Mr. H. W. Patton severed his connection with the HERALD, after an honored career of over three years. His newspaper career in Los Angeles extends over a period of more than four years, and during that time he has become very prominently identified with the newspaper and political history of the city. Energetic in action, bright in style, and, in a word, possessed of many elements of success in his profession, he leaves a record behind him which any young man might well envy. His loss will be felt in reporterial circles, and in the affections of his confreres his place will be hard indeed to fill.

The young gentleman leaves this journal to go into the real estate business with Capt. W. S. Waters, one of the best known young lawyers of Los Angeles, and with Mr. A. Glassell Patton, an accomplished young civil engineer and surveyor. The combination is in all respects a strong one, as all the members of the firm have hosts of friends, the best of reputations, and the earnest backing of many of our largest property holders. Their doors were hardly opened when they drew their first blood in the sale of a piece of city realty at the round figure of $100,000. These young men will make a record of no common order in their new venture.

Sudden Death.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Monier, who has been an inmate of the County Hospital for some time, visited the rooms of the Board of Supervisors for the purpose of asking assistance at the hands of the public. While answering questions asked by Supervisor Macy she was seized with a coughing fit and a hemorrhage ensued. A physician was summoned, but before relief could be obtained she expired. An inquest was held last evening, and the Coroner's jury returned a verdict of death from natural causes.

Inciting Desertion.

Deputy U. S. Marshal Dunlap yesterday arrested J. G. Stutz, of San Diego, on a warrant charging him with having incited a soldier named Louis E. Fuller to desert from his regiment in Texas in 1883. Another charge of harboring the deserter has been placed against him. He was taken before United States Commissioner Van Dyke and his bail fixed at $1000. He will probably be examined on Monday.

Undelivered Messages.

Theatrical.

Mr. Boucicault closed a very successful season last night in the Shaughraun to a crowded house, after a Colleen Bawn matinee, when the house was also full to the doors. On Monday evening Mr. Delano opens in Uncle Tom's Cabin

Set the canary bird's cage on the table where you wish to sit; after a little conference with the bird introduce a finger between the wires near the favorite perch, holding it there patiently, yourself occupied with book or paper the while. Presently, as it shows no disposition to harm him, he actually goes up to examine it. Then he picks to ascertain its quality, maybe he fights it. That is well; he no longer fears it. Pay him with a little bird food; put him away. Next day try him again. He may go farther and light on it, or he may be several days getting thus familiar. Be patient. Once this step is attained, vary the programme by introducing the finger in other spots. He will soon light on it at any point or angle. Then try the door, at first thrusting the finger under it, next time fasten it open, blockading egress with the rest of the hand as one finger extends within. When he perches on it draw him forth a little; next time tempt him to perch outside a little, and so on. In a short time you have but to open the cage door, uplift a finger, and he is sure to fly to it; and he may thus be called to any part of the room to rest on the familiar perch. Most birds learn this familiarity in a few days, yet there are those who will be two or four weeks about it.—[Our Dumb Animals.

The G. A. R. Illustrated Herald.

This office is now well supplied with the splendid G. A. R. edition of the Illustrated Herald. It is superbly adorned pictorially, and printed in the very best style known to the art. Are You Bilious?

The Regulator never fails to cure. I most cheerfully recommend it to all who suffer from Bilious Attacks or any Disease caused by a disarranged state of the Liver.
KANSAS CITY, Mo. W. R. BERNARD.

Do You Want Good Digestion?

I suffered intensely with Full Stomach, Headache, etc. A neighbor, who had taken Simmons Liver Regulator, told me it was a sure cure for my trouble. The first dose I took relieved me very much, and in one week's time I was as strong and nearly as I ever was. It is the best medicine I ever took for Dyspepsia.
RICHMOND, VA. H. G. CRENSHAW.

Do You Suffer from Constipation?

Testimony of HIRAM WARNER, Chief-justice of Ga.: "I have used Simmons Liver Regulator for Constipation of my Bowels, caused by a temporary derangement of the Liver, for the last three or four years, and always with decided benefit."

Have You Malaria?

I have had experience with Simmons Liver Regulator since 1865, and regard it as the greatest medicine of the times for diseases peculiar to malarial regions. So good a medicine deserves universal commendation.

THIS office is now well supplied with the splendid G. A. R. edition of the ILLUSTRATED HERALD. It is superbly adorned pictorially, and printed in the very best style known to the art. The reading matter is all about Southern California, her climate, resources and other attractions. This is the best publication extant to send to friends in the east, who desire to know about this section. It is sold at the low price of 15 cents per copy.

The President and Pensions.

A few over zealous and partisan members of the Grand Army, whose Republican bias is so strong as to warp their better judgment, wished to create a little political capital, and not being able to discover any solid ground on which to base an attack on the Democratic President, undertook to carry out the scheme on very narrow and very hollow grounds. The pension question is, of course, always a "live" one in the Grand Army. The pocket question, the bread and butter question, is always a "live" one in any body of people. This was, therefore, seized upon as the best on which to make an issue. But the veterans are growing old, and with the snows of years upon our heads hot counsels do not usually commend themselves to our judgment matured by long experience. The resolutions looking to censuring the President were so amended that all the matter was stricken out, excepting what referred to the veto of the bill relating to Mrs. John A. Logan.

It was well that those cooler counsels prevailed, for any other course would have reacted on those concerned to their disadvantage. The President's policy in relation to pensions' has been liberal toward those deserving soldiers who need national aid; it has been just toward these who neither deserved nor needed aid. We will not say the deserving, needy ones should be grateful. The nation pays this debt with pleasure, and asks for no gratitude. But from that relentlessly just policy which seeks to exclude from the benefits of this great national reward to the brave, all who did not merit it, the soldiers themselves reap by far the most good. They should esteem it a personal blessing and an honor to every soldier that pension brokers, schemers, unworthy and undeserving persons of all sorts should be debarred from sharing in this benefaction. Should such schemers succeed, it would be by open robbery of the whole nation; it would be to the lasting dishonor of the deserving soldiers, for such a course would bring the whole business and all connected with it into lasting igoominy; and finally, it would imperil the whole system, for when the nation waked up and found itself robbed shamelessly, the result might not distinguish between the innocent and guilty.

Now, General Black, Commissioner of Pensions, in his last annual report shows that at the close of the last fiscal year, June 30, 1887, the pension rolls contained 406,007 pensioners as follows: 204,445 army invalids; 85,010 army widows, minor children, and dependent relatives; 3281 navy invalids; 1975 navy widows, minor children and dependent relatives; 1069 survivors of the war of 1812, and 11,831 widows of those who served in that war; 7503 survivors of the war with Mexico, and 895 widows of those who served in that war. There were added to the rolls during the year 55,194 new pensioners, and 2707 whose pensions had been previously dropped had been restored. The names of 17,677 pensioners were dropped. The aggregate annual value of all pensions is $52,824,641, an increase for the year of $8,116,833. The amount paid for pensions during the year was $73,465,581, an increase over the previous year of $9,669,750. The amount paid to 44,019 new pensioners during the year upon first payment was $25,166,990; 1,091,200 pension claims have been filed since 1861, and 676,948 have been allowed; 55,194 original certificates were issued, a greater number than ever before in one year. The Commissioner advises that the $2 per month for minor children be increased to $5; that a widow be allowed to draw pension from the date of the death of her husband instead of from the date of filing her petition; that the rate of total deafness be increased to $30 per month; and that the rank subsequently attained by the pensioner may be considered in fixing the rate of his pension.

Now, if any one can think of any other element of liberality to infuse into the pension business, which will not be palpably unjust to the people, will he kindly set it forth? Remember this last year, and the last two years, all the additions made to the pension lists, and any measure of larger relief granted those on the lists, while they are the bounty of the people, they came through a Democratic Congress and a Democratic administration. The pension issue as raised by the fellow from Omaha in the Grand Army is a false one, and it is well the great majority saw it.

Gath's Views.

George Alfred Townshend, usually called "Gath," the correspondent of Murat Halstead's paper, the Cincinnati Enquirer, was in San Francisco a few days ago, and of course he had to take his own prescription and submit to be interviewed. Mr. Townshend is familiar with most of the political features of the time. He gives utterance to sound wisdom in the following forecast:

The issue of the next Presidential campaign is still very doubtful. The way the political pivot will turn depends largely on the material condition, either its progress or retrogression, between the present time and the November election in 1888. The voters of this country are every year voting more on propositions of their material advancement than on the lines of traditional partisanship, and voting because our fathers so voted is passing away. A business depression throughout the nation or a financial panic like that of '73 would nullify whatever chances Cleveland would have of re-election.

The people are voting more on propositions of material advancement than on old lines of traditional partisanship. Material advancement is the battle cry of the day, and no party can win on traditions or dead issues. The Gould and Vanderbilt faction tried hard to defeat Mr. Cleveland by a Casandra cry of ruin, but the attempt failed. The prosperity of the country is greater by a large ratio to-day than it was when the Democracy returned to power, and the policy of that party is steadily improving this condition. Nor will there be any financial crash such as "Gath" refers to, and such, no doubt, as many political leaders among the "outs" would be glad to see, to impair the prospects of the Democracy. That party has for the key-stone of its arch the material advancement of the people, and that will hold up its political house in spite of any strain.

Speaking of Mr. Blaine, and his chances "Gath" developes a similar vein of shrewdness. He says, speaking of the Man from Maine:

No. He was its (the Republican party) nominee at the last election, and the battle was fought on certain lines. What is the good of fighting them over again? The Republican party, if it desires to win, must not allow itself to nominate candidates in deference to politicians. It should get out of the old groove and have leaders who are not identified with its old quarrels and internal strife. Any man who is more conspicuous for his dissensions than for his harmony should be dropped. I believe the Republican party will fight its battle in the same way it fought with Garfield. It wants some new, good blood, and this will be obtained from the younger generation who have no animosities nursed and fostered with the growth of years, knowing no obliteration but by the gratification of revenge. Of this younger generation I think Robert Lincoln stands the best chance. He made a good Secretary of War, and of all officials is the one that most resembles Cleveland in his attention to the business of his office.

We cannot say that Mr. Townshend's sagacity clings to him all the way through. That there is any political strength in young Mr. Lincoln is doubtful. But that the Republican party must be reconstructed to win is manifest. The policy of fighting the battle on the lines on which the last one was lost, is conspicuous foolishness. The Republican party sees this, and that prevision is more than likely to shelve Mr. Blaine.

Abate the Nuisance.

The proposition that the constitution of the United States gives us all the right to worship as we please and what we please, or not to worship at all if we please, is incontrovertible. The proposition that no constitution gives any man any right to constitute himself a nuisance to any other man in his worship, or in any other way is just as incontrovertible. While, therefore, the street gamin has no right to molest that nondescript thing known as the Salvation Army, the Army has as little right to do its bizarre rites in such time or place as will interfere with other people's business. Last night on Spring street, in front of the Court House, these people assembled in force; set up their idols in the shape of a pair of flambeaus breathing more smudge than light, and then and there proceeded to add noise to smoke so as to gather a crowd. The crowd came thick and fast until, as the devotions of the leader grew more boisterous if not more reverential, the street was jammed so that passage along the sidewalk was impossible, and along the middle of the street difficult. Stores were open to the right and left. People were trying to get to offices to attend to business, but no road lay open to any one. At last a policeman appeared and caused the crowd to move on. The Army should have been made to move first. They were the cause of the gathering, and consequent blockading of the street. The purpose of the noise of one sort or other was to gather the crowd. The purpose of the halt when the Army took to its knees in the thoroughfare was to hold the crowd at that particular spot. No power can give them any right to do this. No law human or divine can give them the right to interfere with the business of other people. Move them on, and keep them moving. If the Turk forgets the peaceful gospel, and calls in the aid of the sword of Mohamed, let him be recalled to his senses.

VIRGINIA in the old times was known as the Mother of Presidents. In the brand-newest times Ohio is known as the Grandmother of them—a saying not quite clear in expression. The Buckeye Statesmen, condoning the faulty phisosiology, have not been of a very high order as they have come to the surface of late. Allan G. Thurman and Salmon P. Chase were giants; but when one gets down to Hayes and Foraker, there is a decided decadence. By the way, the Empire State has left a pretty wide wake behind her ship of state as she appears, with her great sons aboard of her. She counts to-day a very large number of men of overtowering ability among our public men. The President, her own Governor, Mr. Evarts, ex-Senator Conkling, are well known names in contemporary history. Going back we find in the foremost ranks of public men in New York a list of her executive officers including such men as George Clinton, John Jay, DeWitt Clinton, W. L. Marcy, Martin Van Buren, Horatio Seymour, and Samuel J. Tilden. George Clinton was governor of his State for twenty-one years, and DeWitt Clinton for eleven. Such were the men who led the Democracy in their day; and such are the men and such the party at whom the Forakers of our time sneer, and think they can sneer out of existence. Poor sneerers!

IN THE press dispatches in our columns this morning will be found a very sensational episode in the famous suit of Sarah Althea Hill against Senator Sharon, whose place since his death is taken by the executors of his estate. The gentlemen involved all stand high, and it is a great puzzle as to where the truth lies, or what the result may be.

I. O. O. F.

A Drill, Dance and Banquet at Armory Hall.

The members and visiting members of the I. O. O. F. met last night in Armory Hall, the occasion being the drill and inspection before the General commanding. The canton presented a fine and soldierly appearance and are well drilled. They went through the manual with the zeal of veterans and were highly complimented by the Adjutant-General John C. Underwood. The hall was crowded with a most select audience composed of the best citizens of the city. The costumes worn by the ladies were costly and taken with the regalias of the order made the scene one of striking brilliancy. The hall was tastefully decorated with garlands, flowers and flags. Above the stage was hung the mystic symbol of the order, underneath which the word of "Welcome" hung, while from the sides, suspended under the banners of the order and flags of the country, were the figures 1819-1887, representing the period during which the order in the United States has existed. The chandeliers were hung with evergreens and banners, beneath which those assembled passed to and fro. The parade in the hall was led by the visiting members of the I. O. O. F., followed by the drill. Scarce had the lingering footsteps of the comrades died out when sweet strains of music called forth the merry dancers to the waltz.

General Underwood, in a few brief words, introduced General Nicholson, Past Grand Sire of the order, who said: "By request of the order I have been called upon to make a few remarks. I trust I am not intruding on your pleasure in addressing you, but my brethren have insisted that I shall say a few words to you. There are those who have read the Christmas story of the man who was going home on Christmas Eve, and on entering his old home, he thought he met his old partner. The ghost of his former partner seemed to say to him that the business of life was not to make money, but higher and nobler aims must be the ambition in life. He compared the trees of the north all bent by the winds of the northwest to a man whom avarice and usury had bent down and turned gray.

There is no work in this town or any other town compared with the work of this order, for its aim is to build something that will lasi as long as the stars. We have heard of one or many men having been struck down, but half a million men banded together to help one another in the time of sickness and distress are hard to overcome. In my own State we have distributed over $500,000 during the last twelve months."

He paid high praise to the Daughters of Rebekah who, he claimed, were one of the main features of the order, for they have something to work for in tending the homes of the orphans and keeping up the homes for the indigent Odd Fellows. At the close of his remarks dancing was resumed and was followed by an elegant supper.

THE SCHOOLS.

Teachers' Meeting at the Spring-Street School.

The public schools of this city will open to-morrow morning, at which time it is expected that over 5000 children will present themselves for admission. Some of these children will be able to attend school but half a day until the buildings for which the bonds were recently voted have been constructed. This will not be for some time yet, as the bonds have not been sold. Until this is done nothing in the way of building can take place.

Yesterday afternoon there was a general meeting of the teachers of the department at the Spring-street school house, at which the teachers, many of them new to the work, were given some hints as to their method of procedure. Considerable trouble is expected to arise to-morrow morning, from the fact that there will in all probability be more children apply for seats than can be accommodated, and the first day will be devoted entirely to enrolling and classifying.

The school districts have not been changed and children will report at the schools in their districts. There are some districts where there are too few class rooms and it is in these that chan es are to be made. The San Pedro street school has but one class room, but in all probability enough children will present themselves to-morrow morning to form four or five classes. If this is the case they will be taken to another school house where they will be taught half a day. The Brooklyn Heights school is in the same category, but parents are requested to have their children at the school houses in their districts early to-morrow morning so that the principals and teachers may bring order out of chaos as soon as possible. At the teachers meeting yesterday afternoon the teachers were given warrents for one-tenth of their salary and were addressed by Superintendent Fresner and Mrs. A. S. Averill.

Emma Abbott.

The Rochester Union of recent date says: "The announcement of the return of Emma Abbott will be received with pleasure by her many friends and admirers in Rochesters, by whom she is held in such high esteem. The opera season will begin Thursday, September 29th, when Verdi's immortal "Trovatore" will be presented, with Emma Abbott as Leonora, a role that last season proved one of her greatest successes. On Friday she will be heard as Marguerita in "Faust," and on Saturday she will be heard in two widely different operas, viz: "The Carnival of Venice," a comic opera of the true Italian school, and "Ruy Blas," Marchetti's romantic opera founded upon the celebrated drama of that name by Victor Hugo, in which Bernhardt made such a great success. The company is stronger now than at any other period of its prosperous existence, as will be seen from the following list of principals: Emma Abbott, Lizzie Armandale, Helene Bertram, Bertha Fricke, Alice Bateman and Mlle Ely, Senor Michelena, A. Montegriffo, Wm. Pruette, Wm. Broderick, Walter Allen, R. Beaumont and Frank Delano. Signor Tomasi still has charge of the finely-equipped chorus and orchestra. The costuming of each opera will be elegant and appropriate, particularly for Trovatore" and "Ruy Blas," and n the latter opera she will wear her iamous crown, studded with 387 diamonds.

Miss Abbott's company differs little, as shown above, from that she was here last winter.

Musical Entertainment.

Miss Ida Collins, one of Sig. Farini's best pupils, who made such a favorable debut at Santa Monica lately, will be the recipient of a complimentary concert tendered to her so that she may finish her musical education. Miss Collins fully deserves this token, as she is an ambitious, faithful student with a beautiful voice. The Programme which was given at Santa Monica by Sig. Farini and his artists will probably be repeated; with a new promising tenor, Mr. E. W. Doane; Miss Hattie Cutler, (fine contralto); Mr. Henry Howard, (basso profundo). Mlle Marie Cobb, a pupil of Hans von Buelow, and only lately arrived here has also kindly consented to play one of her exquisite Piano Solos. The Concert will take place at Armory Hall, Friday evening, October 21st.

A Daily Guide.

A new and needed venture is that of R. R. Haines and Frank Cobler who have issued the first number of the Daily Guide and Advertiser. This publication is designed to furnish the public with a means of knowing exactly where rooms and houses can be obtained and as it will be posted conspicuously it will attract considerable attention. In form the Gnide is neat and attractive and in the manner of the arrangement of its contents it is as nearly perfect as the printers' art can make it.

A New Clerk.

Officer Edmond R. Alford was yesterday appointed clerk to the Chief of Police force. Mr. Alford held a similar position in San Erancisco, which town he left to come to Los Angeles nearly a month ago. Already he has made a number of important arrests and has proved himself to be a good officer and in every way worthy of the promotion he has received.

A Drunken Pair.

John Dogherty and a lady of color became intoxicated, on Los Angeles street, yesterday, and grew very boisterous upon the sidewalk. Officer Ribble arrested them, and at the City Prison the woman was too drunk to give her name. She was booked as "Nigger Ellen," and consigned to a cell.

Postponement.

The import of a telegram received at the latest hour last evening by Messrs. Peck & Lafleur from Arizona, necessitates the postponement of their excursion which was to leave Monday morning. The excursion will be delayed about one week.

FRENCH JOURNALISM.

A Graduated Scale of Prices for Actors.

In France it has long been a necessity for the notabilities—especially the minor ones—of the stage that they should stand well with the press, and M. Aurelian School stated the other day "how well it was done." He quotes a tariff issued by one of these journalists who live more by the sale of puffs than by the circulation of their papers. There is much that is instructive therein. The fees range from 10 cents for saying that the payee thereof is "always good-humored" to $10 for the valuable statement that "he was yesterday recognized on the boulevard and rapidly surrounded by an admiring crowd." To have said that he is "negotiating terms for an engagement in Russia" is very probably worth the charge of $2 to a struggling Paris actor. A similar charge is made for the statement that "he has adopted the child of the machinist who fell through the flies and was killed." A fee of $3 is demanded for stating that the payee "has attracted the attention of the Director General of the Comedie Francaise." Twenty francs is decidedly cheap for mentioning the actor's "rumored engagement to a young lady of the aristocratic faubourg of St. George," while no actor would grudge the fee of $6 for having it stated in the newspapers "that at the close of the performance the manager had increased his salary."—[Boston Advertiser.

CONKLING AND SCRIPTURE.

An Interesting Encounter at Quotation He Once Had.

Recently a correspondent of the Sun calling attention to a blunder made by a well-known lawyer in quoting scripture, signed himself "C." A party of lawyers were speculating as to who "C." was. One of them said:

"Why, it's Conkling, of course. I know all the lawyers in New York, and I'll take an affidavit that Roscoe Conkling is the only one that knows enough scripture to quote even the Lord's Prayer correctly. He has the Bible at his fingers' ends, or seems to have, once he gets started quoting it, and he does that often. In a day's speech he always slings in a score or more of quotations from the Bible, every one so apt that it seems impossible that they are impromptu, and not looked up before hand. But he really does evolve them on the spot.

"I saw that proved once during the arguments in the great Dinsmore railroad suits out at Trenton, some three years ago. He and Secor Robeson were on opposite sides. They had talked nearly all day. The court room was crowded and hot, and every one was weary of the railroad case. Conkling was talking away, and Robeson lay back in a big chair, with his curly gray hair, jolly red face and gross bulk making him look like some aged Bacchus resting from his romp. Conkling was looking his best and seemed a Jove to Robeson's Bacchus. Suddenly Robeson, ponderously raising his hand, interrupted Conkling with some quotation pleasantly satirical. He laughed as he did so, until his fat form quivered like jelly. In an instant Conkling retorted with a quotation that was even more apt than Robeson's, and turned the laugh. Robeson was ready almost as quickly with another quotation, and Conkling's parry was as prompt as before. The other lawyers got interested, the court smiled, and everybody felt a grateful relief from the strain of the long day's speecher. Conkling and Robeson enjoyed it as well as any one, and for a quarter of an hour railroads and dry figures were dropped, while great Jove and Bacchus flung quoted jest at one another. Robeson did well, but Conkling was marvelous. The Bible and poets and sages of all times paid tribute to his demand for a tart repartee. When the duel finally ended it was Robeson who dropt it first.

"One of Conklin's best hits was when Robeson introduced some allusion to so commonplace a thing as a fact, and Conkling, with an inimitable gesture, pointed to Robeson and exclaimed:

"A primrose by the river's brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more."

"What finally squelched Robeson was, I believe, something from Pope. Conkling, with a mock reverential bow to Robeson, who was still lying back in his chair and shaking with laughter, exclaimed:

"See, where he

"'Shakes his ambrosial locks and gives the nod,
The stamp of fate and sanction of the God.'

"After that I never suspected Conkling of having his quotations made to order beforehand."—[N. Y. Sun.

President Cleveland.

The exceeding brutality with which the Republican boodle press and the chief boodler leaders have continually assaulted President Cleveland ever since he has been President has been little less foul and criminal than the conduct of Herr Most and the condemned Anarchists. They are never weary of denouncing him for hiring a substitute to go to the war, just as their pet Mr. Blaine did. For his conduct touching the rebel flags, which was simply a mistake made with the best of intentions—that of healing up the strife which the boodler politicians are desirous of perpetuating as a boodle issue, they have loaded falsehoods and epithets and curses upon him which would dishonor a crowd of drunken squaws seated around their sixth bottle of benzine lightning.

And in his appointments and his daily acts and his family concerns they have pursued him like famishing wolves. Here they have assailed him as a criminal for acts which they would have praised as virtuous every time had Mr. Blaine been the actor. Even Mrs. Cleveland has been stung by the scorpions. And the boodle portion of the Republican press has inscribed on the world's history a stigma on the moral character of the American people, who permit such outrages and endorse them by subscribing to those papers.

The fact is, the world sees and knows that Mr. Cleveland has made an excellent President, as compared with the preceding one—a splendid one for a Democrat or a Republican. The best endorsement of his honesty and capability is the hatred he has incurred of the scalawag element of his own party, whose schemes for public plunder he has spoiled. And another best endorsement is the miserable empty charges that are brought against him by his Republican enemies.

The Prohibitionists have no interest in Mr. Cleveland, but hope he or one as capable and honest may occupy the White House till a Prohibition President takes the place. We hope no man may get there whose name is discreditably mixed up in the scandals of railroad steals and monopoly boodle complications; no man whose vote has been secured in Congress by bribes of corporation stock. And especially none of the Foraker stamp, who point with pride to their Dow law, which opens the dramshop on Sunday, nor any who strive to make the dramshop a perpetual curse, as Mr. Blaine does. —[Censor.

The Future of Our Boys.

It stands to reason that all boys cannot achieve wealth and fame, but as the years go by the proportion of the fortunate ones will constantly grow larger. What is needed more than anything else to add to the usefulness and honor of coming generations is a higher and fuller appreciation of the dignity of labor. We have in mind the experience of a Maryland boy who was left several thousand dollars by his father. He did not squander it, as many boys would have done, but he determined to spend it all, and he did it in such a way that it became the very best investment that he could have made. He went into one of the railway shops of the city at nominal wages and paid the rest of his expenses out of his little fortune. He learned all he could in a practical way there and then entered a first-class school of technology. By the t me he graduated his money was all gone, but he was able to earn his way. He kept on learning, and the consequence was that he soon rose to an excellent position, and to-day he is in receipt of a splendid salary and is considered one of the best men in his profession in the country.

Mr. Roberts, the wonderfully able and astute President of the Pennsylvania railroad, started out as a chain carrier in a surveying party. Mr. Frank Thomson, the Vice-President of the same road, was an apprentice in the Altoona shops. Mr. Samuel Spencer, of the Baltimore and Ohio, and one of the best railroad men in the country, was a clerk not many years ago at Camden station. Instances innumerable could be cited, and the moral of them all would be to learn a trade and to trust to industry and application for promotion. The future of our boys is the future of our country. We have not the slightest doubt that it will be brilliant and substantial; but the individual cases of marked success must always depend upon the capacity and industry of the individuals. Boys who look upon life as a serious problem that must be worked out and not played out, are able to take care of themselves. The idlers, who expect to live off money that they do not earn, are the drones in the great national hive of industry.—[Baltimore American.

The Decay of Iron.

Mr. David Stiles, of Middleton, who has been a practical worker in iron with his own hands for more than fifty years, has written an interesting letter to the Salem Gazette, in which he shows by observation that iron rots from age. He says that the continual jar has the effect to weaken the tensile strength of iron, which statement he illustrates by saying that the step of a carriage when new may be bent back and forth without breaking, but after a few years' service it will break, no matter how well preserved. The same loss of tensile strength is noted in carriage springs. The poorest may be safely warranted for a year, but even after that short time they begin to break, and those of the best quality will break after years of constant and trying service. The writer has found that old crowbars, made of the best Swedish iron and used by the early settlers of New England, have become so rotten that they could not be welded when broken and had an offensive smell when the welding heat was applied.

Formerly all iron was wrought by the trip-hammer, which scattered all the brittle and worthless material, but the substitution of the rollers makes it possible to run bars through which contain the poorest stock. Iron made from newly mined ore, even if of poorer quality, is safer than that into the manufacture of which scrap iron is introduced, which is now imported in large quantities. The writer, as a practical iron worker, expresses the opinion that, as this scrap iron may be the old English bar iron, which sixty years ago was of little value except for heavy ties, it is unfit for truss or suspension bridges. The matter to which this man of long experience calls attention is a very important one, and should be made the subject of a general investigation.—[Boston Journal.

Anaheim Notes.

Money is getting plentiful. The Anaheim Union Water Company has been offered by a Los Angeles capitalist $50,000 for a term of not less than five years, of seven per cent. interest.

The Southern California Semi-Tropic Fruit Company's orchard in North Anaheim is one of the most magnificent and attractive places in the county. Several offers have been made for it lately, the last one being a few days ago when $51,000 in cash was offered by a gentleman who desired it for a home place. The company refused the offer.

The progressive and pretty district of Centralia, which includes the flourishing town of Buena Park, proposes to have one of the prettiest school houses in the county, and to get the sinews of war an election has been called to vote upon the question of issuing bonds to the amount of $4000. The notice of election is published in another column. There is every reason to believe that the bonds will be voted for unanimously, and we therefore expect to chronicle great things about Centralia in the not distant future.—[Anaheim Gazette.

Press Opinions.

There has been nothing in the nature of political legislation that has been brought before judges in our own States, but there has been much of it to engage the attention of the Supreme Court of the United States, and the most important questions raised under it have been decided against the Republican party by these Republican judges whom they have themselves selected.—[New York Herald, Ind.

New York is naturally a Democratic State, but the result depends on the tariff programme which the free traders are said to be hatching. The nearer the Democratic party comes to carrying out the wise and conservative views of Mr. Randall, the nearer it will come to carrying New York, and the same may be said of Connecticut, New Jersey, North Carolina and Tennessee.—[Atlantic Constitution, Dem.

But it must not be forgotten that if it were practicable for Mr. Fairchild to pour out every dollar of the surplus, in thirty days the money would pour back again under our present laws, and the same difficulty that we now have would occur. There is only one adequate remedy, which is to reduce taxation, and that is also demanded by every consideration of justice, prudence and sound government.—[New York Times, Ind.

The story of the wounded collie who was guided by two terriers to King's College Hospital in order to have his wound dressed is very remarkable, but there are still stranger instances of canine sagacity. The Ettrick Shepherd, for example, possessed a collie, which, through long and faithful service, had come to bear a striking facial resemblance to his master. This dog was an assiduous church-goer, and would even occasionally occupy its master's pew on occasions when Hogg himself played truant from divine service. On the Monday after one of these occasions, when indisposition had kept the shepherd at home, the minister of the parish called and found Hogg sitting on one side of his ingleneuk, the dog on the other. "Weel, James," said the minister, "I was glad to see you at the kirk yesterday." James said nothing, but he looked across at the dog; the dog, too, said nothing, but his eye twinkled, and he placidly winked at James! This story is vouched for by Hogg himself, an unimpeachable witness. It seems to indicate an even subtler refinement of canine intelligence than the anecdote attested by the secretary and porter of King's College Hospital. —[Pall Mall Gazette.

AN ANECDOTE OF GLADSTONE.

His Wonderful Memory and His Habit of Listening to Others.

Perhaps it is in private life that Mr. Gladstone's vitality and versatility are most remarkable. It is a great sight to watch him at dinner with a few friends. He never talks for the sake of talking, but listens attentively to every one else, and is eager to draw out from his company all they can tell him. But they feel the influence of a master mind in the smallest details. Mr. Gladstone asks a dozen searching questions in a few moments, and presents the subject in an entirely new light by some exposition that the listeners never dreamed of. He is full of reminiscences, and seems to imagine that everybody's memory ought to be as tenacious as his own. One night when he was Prime Minister he sat on the Treasury bench with only one colleague beside him. He was apparently asleep, and the other man thought he might indulge in a doze. But presently a Tory speaker ventured upon some historical statement. Mr. Gladstone was on the alert at once. Turning to his companion he said: "That is entirely wrong. This fellow is mixing up his facts and his dates. Don't you remember?" Then he proceeded to explain some obscure passage of political history of which his unfortunate colleague was obliged to confess entire ignorance. Mr. Gladstone looked at him for a moment in pitying wonder, and as soon as he dared the hapless man slunk away. Meeting a friend he said: "I'm going home; I can't stand that fiendish old man any more. Why, he actually cross-examined me about something that happened before I was born."—[Philadelphia Times.

TOPEKA.

The Southern California G. A. R. Feted.

THE INCIDENTS OF THE TRIP.

An Ovation with a Resume of the Speeches Thereat—Scenes.

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 24, 1887.

We reached this place at 10 o'clock, that is our section, for our train was divided into three—and were furnished with transportation on the street cars, a ticket to the fair grounds, this being the last day of the State Fair, and a ticket to a well-spread table at the grounds. The waving of handkerchiefs as we entered the suburbs of the city showed the estimation in which the soldiers are held, and it did seem as those waved by ebony hands preponderated.

At 11 o'clock the fine, spacious hall of the House of Representatives was crowded, the people of Topeka being requested to yield their seats to "our guests from California." Marshall's military band of Topeka greeted us, and next the Modoc Club sang "Hail, Flag of the Free."

Hon. J. P. Johnson, ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives, who presided, then announced that the Seventh Infantry Band of Los Angeles would favor the audience with a selection. [Loud cheering.] When they had rendered their selection in an artistic manner the encore was so long continued that they performed another, greatly to the delight of the audience. In their new and gay uniform they made a fine appearance. Then came "Recollections of the War," by Marshall's military band. The music was all choice, especially by the famous Modoc Club, which will be remembered by those who attended the encampment last year.

The President, ex-Speaker Johnson, of the Kansas Legislature, said he was sorry the programme was not carried out, but it was a mistake of the head and not of the heart. He said a programme was easily made and looked well on paper, but he never knew one to be fully carried out. It was the purpose that the soldiers should be marshalled and march in solid column to the Capitol. But we welcome you formally and informally. We welcome you as a body; we welcome you as individuals; we welcome you as soldiers; we welcome you as citizens of the Pacific Slope; we welcome you as soldiers having worn the blue; we welcome you as soldiers having worn the gray, if you have heartily returned to your allegiance to the stars and stripes. But to those who say the great issues of the war—the principles for which we took up arms against the Government, are yet to be settled by future historians, we have no fellowship.

We are sorry you can't stay longer, but glad you thought enough of us to stop at all. We can't give you such a welcome as you gave us a year ago, only because we lack the power; but every chicken in Topeka roosted low last night. He then introduced Adjutant General Campbell, of the State, who, in a speech seldom equaled for eloquence, gave us welcome. He referred to our unsurpassed climate, our grand mountains, our orange groves and vineyards, our exhaustless flowers filling our health-giving air with the sweetest perfume, and lastly, of our beautiful women, whose cheeks are like the roses of our gardens and the peaches of our orchards. These women the gallant soldiers of Kansas would never get tired of looking upon, and would they might stay with us forever. He then said: "We welcome you in the name of the State of Old John Brown, whose 'soul goes marching on;' in the name of the State whose soil drank the first martyr blood in the cause of freedom; in the name of the State which sent more soldiers into the army, according to her population, than any State in the Union, in the name of a State having more widows and orphans to provide for, proportionately, than any of her sisters; in the name of a State yielding to none in loyalty to the flag that represents the best government God ever made; in the name of a State having a present population of over a million and a half, and of resources almost unbounded.

In conclusion, he spoke of the reception the G. A. R. met with in San Francisco last year, declaring it unequaled in the history of the world. He hoped the time was not far distant when the people of Topeka would have a chance to reciprocrate this unsurpassed hospitality.

General Solomon, Department Commander of the G. A. R. of California, was introduced, who replied to the speech of welcome in words both appropriate and eloquent. He eulogized the State, speaking of the broad fields through which we had passed, the neat villages and farmhouses; her streams of limpid water (so pure and abundant withal, referring doubtless to the absence of a certain beverage interdicted by the State); the evidences of internal prosperity so apparent to even a casual observer; the thriving city of 35,000 souls whose guests we are to-day and of the grand and beautiful capitol in which we are convened. In conclusion, he said, a Kansas regiment during the war sent terror to the enemies of the government, like the grasshopper to the farmers of Kansas in the years gone by.

A lawyer from San Francisco, whose name we failed to hear, made a stirring speech and was loudly cheered.

Gen. Salomen then said, it is getting late, and we all want our dinner, but there is a lady here whom we must hear from, and Mr. President, if through timidity or any other cause, she refuses, don't let her off, for she will make a better speech than any man here. Mr. President, I introduce to you Mrs. Kinney, President of the Womans Relief Corps of the G. A. R.

Mrs. Kinney said, I have been with Gen. Salomen for six days on the route, and would not have believed he would serve me such a trick. My only satisfaction is, that some day, I may get even with him. But joking aside. We have collected during the year, $57,000, relieved 11,000 soldiers and widows, and have to-day in the treasury, $37,000. We are going to build a Home. Not for soldiers, for we have this already; but a Home for Soldiers Widows and Orphans. We shall get this from individuals. Miss Leland Stanford gave me a check for $1,000 just as I left, and an old bachelor at San Jose $1,000, so we shall not call on the G. A. R. for a dollar.

The last speaker called out was Gen. Vandever, Representative from the Seventh Congressional District, who said we are all so anxious to get to the dinner table that his speech would be short. It was "short and sweet."

But the dinner, the dinner to which we all had free. Such a dinner! We did it justice in fact, but we can't in words. So abundant! Such boiled ham! Such bread! Such coffee! Such doughnuts! Such ice-cream! Such apple pie! And then, that 800 could be served with so much order, with so little confusion and with such promptness. Every tongue was full of praise save one. Her memories will ever linger in our minds like sweet perfume, wherever in the providence of God, our lot may be cast. Whenever we think of her women, we shall know they understand the woman's great secret, that the "road to a man's affections, runs straight through his stomach." We shall know that the women of Topeka, for getting up big dinners beat the world.

Topeka is a beautiful city. Her capitol, when completed, will be exceeded by few if any in any state in the Union. The Representative chamber in which the reception is held, is grand! We were sorry that time did not allow us to see the products of this great state, the last day of her state fair, but from what we did see, there are no special signs, because she has banished that bane of the nation's—the saloon—she is going to everlasting smash.

But few incidents of interest happened on the journey from Los Veges, unless we mention the accident to H. C. Thomas, Esq., of Los Angeles who had two of his fingers smashed flat as a knife blade in a door. A surgeon on board pressed them into shape, and they are doing well, though very painful.

Going down a very steep grade into the Valley of the Rio Grande, the couplin pin of the engine leaped out, leaving the heavy train some 300 yards in the rear. But for the perfection of the automatic air-brakes, the Tehatchapa disaster would have been a trifling affair in comparison to what would have happened.

AT WORK.

Building of the Railroad from Perris to San Jacinto.

At last after long and untiring efforts on the part of our citizens, we have succeeded in arriving at definite terms with the California Southern Railroad Company, they agreeing to build a line of road from Perris, a point on that line, to San Jacinto, for the sum of $55,000, which has been raised, and was turned over to them on Monday. As soon as the contract was accepted and signed by Messrs. Perris, Smith and other officials of the road, an order was issued for work to be commenced immediately, which was responded to by a corps of surveyors being sent out to make corrections in the old survey, and set permanent stakes for the graders to begin work on. The company ordered teams and men to be sent to Perris, which will commence immediately and by the 31st of December will have the grading completed and ready for the ties and iron, which will be put on as soon as the company's iron is received from Europe.

THE ROUTE.

Beginning at a point near the Perris depot, the line of survey extends in a northeasterly direction, up across Dr. Miller's place, through the town of Winchester, and traverses the mesa near the foot-hills, terminating on the Estudillo tract adjoining town. The depot, which will be a large and commodious one, will be located about six hundred feet north from the old Estudillo residence, and only about a quarter of a mile from the center of town. There will be but comparatively little grading to be done on this line, as for the greater part of the distance it extends over the level and unbroken mesa, which composes a large portion of our valley. This, of course, will require little more than an ordinary roadbed, but several good sized cuts and fills have to be made where the road comes through the pass.

Success in this enterprise is principally due to the efforts of Messrs. J. A. Green, H. C. Ashenfelter and James Kerr, who were appointed by the citizens as a committee to raise subsidies and to confer with the railroad company and arrange terms, while valuable assistance was rendered by Messrs. G. H. Phar, P. L. Webber, E. W. Fairchild, W. W. Guthridge and others. The citizens responded liberally to the call for subscriptions and without a single exception, all those who had their names on the old subscription list, (which had been gotten up in July, but owing to the railroad company not being able to get sufficient material to build the road with, was refused) transferred them to the new one for the same amount, while others put a much larger amount to their signatures.

This will give San Jacinto direct railroad communication with San Diego and intermediate points. It will give us a ready market for all our produce.

Already the boom which is being caused by this road is upon us, real estate is changing hands rapidly. Everybody is on the buy and sell, and the times which were so dull during the months of July and August, are now getting livlier every day. Capitalists will invest their money with us and we shall soon be reaping the reward of the dilligent and energetic citizen.—[San Jacinto Register.

LAND COMMITTEE.

A Lot to be Reserved for School Purposes.

The Land Committee of the City Council met yesterday morning and recommended that a deed issue to Mr. Perry for certain lots.

Recommended that the petition of the L. A, Infirmary be denied.

Recommended that the petition of the Board of education for a lot in the Fort Hill tract be denied, the committee being of the opinion that the location of a school building on this tract would not be advisable.

Recommended that a reservation be made of a lot in block H, of suitable size for school purposes, and that the same be reserved from the sale of said property now advertised, and that the Clerk be requested to make said reservation subject to confirmation of the Land Committee.

Miss Irene Lamb

Of 34 South Spring street, wishes to inform the ladies of Los Angeles that her stock of Fall and Winter millinery is now ready for inspection, and she cordially invites them to examine the same during opening week, beginning Tuesday, October 4th.

Decline of the Blonde.

It has been asserted that there has been a gradual decrease of blondes in Germany. Almost 11,000,000 school children were examined in Germany, Austria and Belgium, and the result showed that Switzerland has only 11.10, Austria 19.79, and Germany 31.80 per cent. of pure blondes. Thus the country which, since the days of ancient Rome, has been proverbially known as the home of yellow hair, has to-day only 32 pure blondes in 100, while the average of pure brunettes is 14 per cent., and in some regions rises as high as 25 per cent. The 53 per cent of the mixed type are said to be undergoing a transformantion into pure brunettes. Dr. Beddoe, in England, has collected a number of statistics which seem to point in the same direction. Among 726 women he examined he found 369 brunettes and 357 blondes. Of the brunettes he found that 78 per cent were married, while of the blondes only 68 per cent were married. Thus it would seem that the brunette has ten chances of getting married in England to a blonde's nine. In France a similar view has been put forth by M. Adolph de Candolle. M. de Candolle found that when both parents have eyes the same color, 88 per cent inherit this color. But it is a curious fact that more females than males have black or brown eyes in the proportion of forty-five to forty-three. It seems that with different-colored eyes in the two parents 53 per cent follow the father in being dark-eyed, and 55 per cent follow the mother in being dark eyed. An increase of 5 per cent of dark eyes in each generation must tell in the course of time.

The Washington Monument.

For a number of years there has existed in the minds of a few persons doubts as to the sufficient size and stability of the foundation. These apprehensions becoming widespread, a joint commision was appointed by Congress, consisting of the President of the United States, the Vice-President of the monument society, the Chief of Engineers of the Army, and the architects of the Capitol and Treasury, with instructions to make an investigation of the work already done and to direct and supervise the completion of the structure. This joint commission caused a special investigation to be made by capable engineers, who reported that the foundation was in an unsatisfactory condition, and that it would be "unsafe to subject it to any additional load whatever. The embodiment of these facts in the commission's first report to Congress led to the enactment of a joint resolution, June 14, 1878, authorizing the expenditure of "$36,000, if deemed advisable, to giving greater stability to the fonndation."

An anecdote of this date related by a well-known citizen of New York may illustrate the anxiety felt at that period as to the safety of that structure. President Hayes had taken out New Yorker for an afternoon drive, and the carriage stopped in front of the monument.

"I have never been so near before," remarked the guest.

"Oh! don't be alarmed," instantly replied Mr. Hayes; 'the commission has just reported, and it may not fall down for some time yet."—[Oscar Foote, in The American Magazine for October.

Notice of Hearin

IN THE MATTER OF THE APPLICATION of the Los Angeles Sash and Door Company, a corporation, to dissolve and disincorporate. Notice is hereby given that the Los Angeles Sash and Door Company, a corporation formed under the laws of the State of California, has presented to the Hon. A. W. Hutton, Superior Judge in and for the city and county of Los Angeles, a petition praying to be allowed to disincorporate and dissolve; and that Monday, the 5th day of November, A. D. 1887, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, has been appointed as the time, and the court-room of the Superior Court, Department Four, in Temple Block, in and for the city and county of Los Angeles, as the place at which the said application is to be heard.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the County Court aforesaid, this 30th day of September, A. D. 1887.

C. H. DUNSMOOR, Clerk.
By J. M. DUNSMOOR, Deputy. o1 31t

In the Superior Court

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF Los Angeles. ss. In the matter of the estate of John H. O'Brien, deceased. Notice for publication of time for proving will, etc. Notice is hereby given that Monday, the 17th day of October, 1887, at 10 o'clock A. M of said day, at the court room of this Court, Department Two thereof, in the Jones Block, City of Los Los Angeles, county of Los Angeles, and State of California, has been appointed as the time and place for hearing the application of H. W. O'Melveny, praying that a document now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of the said deceased, be admitted to probate, and that letters testamentary be issued theron to said W. H. O'Melveny, at which time and place all persons interested therein may appear and contest the same.

Dated September 30th, 1887.

C. H. DUNSMOOR, County Clerk
By M. J. ASHMORE, Deputy. o1-10t

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF, Los Angeles—ss. In the matter of the estate of Joseph Le Masne, deceased. No. 3030. Order fixing hearing of petition for sale of real property. In the above entitled matter Emile Vache and H. Aillaud as the executors of the last will of Joseph Le Masne deceased, having presented and filed their verified petition to obtain an order for the sale of the real property of the said estate to pay the debts of the said decedent, and the debts, expenses and charges of administration; and it appearing therefrom that it is necessary to sell the whole or some portion of the said real estate for the purposes and reasons aforesaid and mentioned in the said petition. And it also appearing therefrom that the only heirs at law of the said deceased are Honorine Le Masne, Emma Le Masne and Auguste Le Masne, all now living in the City of Los Angeles, County of Los Angeles, State of California.

Therefore, it is hereby ordered that the said Honorine Le Masne, Emma Le Masne, and Auguste Le Masne and all persons interested in the said estate do appear before this Court, at the court-room of Department No. 2 thereof, in the city of Los Angeles, county of Los Angeles, State of California, Monday, the 31st day of October, 1887, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause why an order should not be made in the said matter for the sale of the real property of the said estate, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purposes aforesaid. It is further ordered that a copy of this order be personally served on the said Honorine Le Masne, Emma Le Masne and Auguste Le Masne, and all persons interested in the said estate, at least ten days before the time appointed as aforesaid for the hearing of the said petition. And it is further ordered that a copy of this order be published four successive weeks in the Los Angeles weekly HERALD, a newspaper in the county of Los Angeles, State of California. It is hereby further ordered that the previous order of this court, made upon said petition and entered the 20th day of September, 1887, be and is hereby vacated and set aside.

Done in open court this 27th day of September, 1887. A. W. HUTTON, Judge.

NEWS NOTES.

No. 45 won the crazy quilt at the raffle at No. 315 Macy street yesterday.

The pay-car gladdened the hearts of the Southern Pacific railway employés yesterday.

Mrs. Sarah Shrader was examined yesterday by Judge O'Melveny, but was found not to be insane.

The Clearing House business during the past week was as follows: Exchanges, $1,271,757.26; balances, $289,878.94.

The defaulting juror, L. L. Price, was found guilty of contempt to Court by Judge Cheney yesterday, and after being lectured was fined $10.

The civil calendar of the October session of the Superior Court, Departments Three and Four, will be called in Judge Hutton's Courtroom on Monday, at 10 o'clock.

Rev. C. W. Heiser, pastor of the English Lutheran Church of this city, will hold a communion service to-day, October 2d, at which service a large number of applications for membership will be received into full connection.

The demurrer of the Times-Mirror Company to the complaint of J. Harry Conlan, who sues them for damages for libel, was overruled yesterday morning by Jddge O'Melveny, and defendants were granted ten days to answer.

Deputy U. S. Marshal Dunlap yesterday arrested Thomas Weller and S. H. Moll who were indicted by the Grand Jury and charged with having smuggled cigars from Mexico at San Diego. Their bonds were fixed at $1000 each.

The charge of assault with intent to murder against Robert J. Pollard of Azusa, was dismissed by Justice Taney yesterday, none of the prosecuting witnesses appearing. The charge grew out of the trouble in relation to water at Azusa.

T. L. Oglesby who was taken to Maverick County, Texas, some time since by Deputy Sheriff White of that place, returned yesterday to this city and visited the Sheriff's office. He was admitted to bail pending his trial, which comes off in November.

The party of surveyors and guides who are to examine the best pass through the Sierra Madre for the Salt Lake and Los Angeles Railroad, will start to-morrow by the way of Captain Moore's Panamint Road, which was partly and well constructed on the west bank of the Arroyo Seco.

Thomas Brown, alias Charles Dobbs charged with having burglarized a room in Mrs. Dupuy's lodging house, occupied by J. F. Baker, and stealing between $50 and $60 out of a trunk on the 6th of June, was taken before Justice Taney yesterday morning. His bail was set at $1000, and in default he was committed to the County Jail.

Mr. S. D. Baker, of the San Francisco Examiner, thinks there are some honest boys in town. He lost his bank book containing some money and valuable papers yesterday, and some little fellow whose name could not be learned returned it, having found it on the corner of Aliso and Los Angeles streets. The little fellow was handsomely rewarded by Mrs. Baker.

The following have been elected officers of the Cooks & Waiters Union for the next year: President, George H. Niemeyer; Vice-President, Ed. P. McDermott; Recording Secretary, A. D. Bishop; Financial Secretary, C. Delavan; Treasurer, John Brink; Marshal, Charles Burke; Inside Guard, Frank A. Hayden; Outside Guard, John Saldatke. Trustees: Lewis Green, Frank Lundstrom, Albert Heflinger. Employment Secretary, George Henry Niemeyer; Past President, Thomas Molyneaux.

Personal Mention.

J. M. Griffith went overland to San Francisco yesterday.

Fred Smythe, marshal of Anaheim town, was in Los Angeles yesterday.

Abbot Kinney of the State Forestry Commission was in the city yesterday.

Judge J. A. Clarke, of Pomona, is in the city and registered at the St. Elmo.

Judge W. S. Van Dyke went to San Francisco by the afternoon train yesterday at 1:30.

James B. Nicholson, of Philadelphia, Past Grand Sire of the I. O. O. F., is at the Nadeau.

O. W. Childs and family returned from their northern tour yesterday by the 11:40 A. M. train.

Jno. H. White, of Albion, N. Y., Grand Sire of the I. O. O. F., is stopping at the Nadeau.

J. J. Ransome, a railroad magnate of Chicago and prominent member of the I. O. O. F., is in town.

Councilman Thomas Goss has returned from his eastern tour very much improved in health.

W. S. Tremaine, of Buffalo, N. Y., a prominent railroad man, is stopping at the Nadeau with his family.

Col. J. S. Kiefer, the popular proprietor of the Grand View Hotel at Monrovia, was at the St. Elmo yesterday.

George W. Frink, President of the Los Angeles Land Bureau, arrived home last evening after an absence of two weeks.

Capt. A. W. Barrett, of this city, has been elected a member of the new "Council of Administration" of the G. A. R. by the Grand Encampment.

Mr. Isaac Trumbo, the representative of Utah and eastern capitalists in the contemplated continuation of the Salt Lake and Los Angeles Railway, went north by the 1:30 train yesterday afternoon.

Wm. Sippy, who has been off on a furlough for a couple of weeks, will put on his conductors' cap and return to duty to-morrow on the passenger train to Santa Barbara.

Edward S. Glass, who left Los Angeles a few years ago as a bright, genial, ambitious school boy, after a residence of a few years in Salt Lake City, has returned in the full flush of young manhood to spend a season in the home, and with the friends of his boyhood.

A. Brigden, manager of the Sierra Madre Vintage Company, was in the city yesterday. He reports the crop of grapes to be larger than was expected. The vintage will be excellent.

A. Hart, one of the prominent real estate men of San Diego and a promoter of many enterprises which tended to lead San Diego into prominence, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday on a business visit. During Mr. Hart's visit he will be the guest of J. L. Vignes.

The following distinguished visitors are visiting this city: Col. Champion S. Chase, ex-Mayor of Omaha, his son Clement Chase, editor of the Omaha Excelsior; Mr. Paul Horbach, a civil engineer; Mrs. Hon. James M. Woodworth and Miss Fannie Butterfield, aunts of Mr. Clement Chase, Miss Menie Woodworth, his cousin, and Miss Bessie Hall.

A PUGILISTIC MONGOL.

He Gets the Best of a White Man.

Ah Charley, a festive Mongolian, while passing along Spring street yesterday afternoon was pounced upon by William Randall, who endeavored to deliver a threshing. The Chinaman proved that he was somewhat familiar with the manly art and in less time than it takes to tell it he had Randall measuring his length upon sidewalk from the effects of a stunning blow in the face. The blood freely from a wound on the forehead. Another Chinaman was about to stamp the life out of Randall when Officer Jackson appeared upon the scene and arrested the beligerant combatants. When they were standing at the desk in the city prison, J. B. Heckman, a bystander, appeared to know so much about the case that he was locked up as a witness.

POLICE COMMISSIONERS.

Selection of Several New Policemen.

A meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners was held yesterday afternoon in the office of the Chief of Police, Mayor Workman presiding. For hours before the meeting the outer room was packed with applicants all wearing an expectant expression and moving nervously from seat to seat. The resignation of C. R. Moffet as clerk of the department was received and accepted, and upon motion he was given a vote of thanks for his efficiency and attentiveness to duty while holding the office. Charles E. Godfrey, W. M. McGrath, J. A. Van Leven, James Fitzpatrick, J. F. Maguire, C. P. Dunham and James Happ were appointed police officers. Two more vacancies still exist on the force which will be filled at the next meeting to be held early next week.

Mother Goose Entertainment.

Last evening a delightful entertainment was given in Campbell Hall, Downey avenue, East Los Angeles, by the children of the Episcopal Church, for the purpose of providing a stained-glass window for the Epiphany Church. Mr. Uuri Embody was chairman, and Mrs. Johnson ably presided at the piano. The various performers were tastefully attired in the costumes in accordance to the characters represented. Subjoined is the programme, with a list of the principal characters:

Part I.—"Sing a Song of Sixpence;" song, "Little Bo Peep" and "Little Boy in Blue;" song, "Jack and Jill;" tableau, King, Queen and Knave of Hearts.

Part II.—"Old Woman with Skirts Cut Off;" song, "Dr. Foster and Mother Hubbard;" song, "Man in the Moon;" song, "Little Jack Horner;" song, "Hush-a-By Baby;" song, "Jack Spratt and wife;" chorus, "Rig-a-Jig-Jig."

Part III.—"Old King Cole" and "Miss Muffitt;" song, "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary;" song, "Daffy Down Dilly."

Part IV.—Song, "Little Man and His Gun;" song, "Rain! Rain! Go Away! "Old Woman and Broom."

Part V.—Song, "Mary Had a Little Lamb;" song, "Come When You Are Called;" song, "Angel Gabriel."

People's Store Facts and Figures.

FOR MONDAY.

These specialties are changed Daily.

To morrow every department will be represented in this list of bargains. They will be so numerous that it will be advisable to cut the list out and bring it with you for reference as none should be overlooked. Their number will embrace so many items that we will not be able to comment at length upon any particular one, as they speak for themselves.

We will begin with a line of ladies', misses' and gent's kid and driving gloves, at 25c a pair. This line comprises ladies' six-button length, Chamois skin and opera shade 3-button kid gloves, misses' chamois skin and gent's heavy kid gloves, all at a uniform price of 25c a pair. The cheapest of them is usually sold at 75c a pair.

Next on the list is an all wool plain and silk embroidered cashmere shawl at $1.25 each. The number is limited and as the inquiries were so numerous, we would advise an early call, as the bargain is so rare, at an early hour they will all be sold. Our regular price is $2.50.

OUR DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT.

In this department we will endeavor to make it a gala day. We have four distinct lines which we will place on sale. Each and every one of them a sacrificing bargain. The first is a line of cashmere beiges in several shades, double fold, at 15c a yard; always sold at 25c a yard. The second is a line of English suitings in brown mixed and grey mixed at 25c a yard, 38 inches wide and a sightly article, never known to have been sold for less than 38c a yard. The third is a line of drap sanglier, double fold dress goods, in all the new shades, at 25c a yard; considered an extra bargain at 40c. The fourth and last is a line of Saxony costume stripes at 25c a yard. These goods are double fold and entirely new in effect and stylish in appearance. All we ask is an inspection of these lines and we are sure to satisfy.

On sale Monday, a line of boy's black gray felt hats at 25c each. Our former price 50c.

On sale Monday, a line of children's regular made black hose at 12½c a pair, size from 5 to 8½. Our former price 20c a pair.

On sale Monday, a line of ladies' full-finished black lisle thread hose, 44c a pair. Reduced from 75c.

On sale Monday, a line of embroidery silk 8 1c a skein. Sold all over at 2½c.

On sale Monday, a line of boys' knee pants 65c a pair, all sizes. Reduced from $1.

On sale Monday, a line of unbleached canton flannel, 6c a yard. Reduced from 8½c

On sale Monday, a line of striped cheviot shirting, 8½c a yard. Reduced from 12½.

On sale Monday, a line of indigo blue prints at 6¾c a yard, or 15 yards for $1, reduced from 8½c.

On sale Monday, a line of black silk Spanish guipure flouncing, $1,50 a yard, reduced from $2.25.

On sale Monday, a line of ladies' colored bordered, hem-stitched handkerchiefs at 8½c each, reduced from 15c.

On sale Monday, a line of woven wire bustles at 45c each, reduced from 65c.

On sale Monday, a line of ladies' gauze undershirts, short or long sleeves, at 15c, reduced from 35c.

On sale Monday, a line of ladies' night gown, with five rows of insertion and tuck, at 85c, reduced from $1.25.

On sale Monday, a line of dress buttons at 10c a dozen. These buttons are all new, pretty in effect, and have the appearance of a costly article. Our usual price, 25c a dozen.

COMBINATION LAND CO.

SPECIAL NO. 4.

"The old oligarchy of Greece now abolished
Were jolly and genial and fond of the arts,
Their tastes were refined, their manners were polished,
But their manner of living affects their hearts.

They neglected their business, they gave themselves airs,
Read the poets in Greek, supped their wine, took their rest,
Never troubling their beautiful heads with affairs,
And as for their morals—the least said the best.

The scandal grew greater and greater; and then
An appeal to the people was formally made,
The old gods were displaced by the suffrage of men
And a popular government formed in their stead."

But time rolls around, and Athena and Juno
And Daphne and Hebe and Flora and Creto,
And a dozen or more Heathen women whom you know,
Each finds work at LEUCADIA, naming a street.

The lyre that in Hades once twanged for Eurydice
Now praises LEUCADIA, Queen of our Coast,
And the lyre tells the truth when it says ne'er before did I see
A place where the truth seems a lie and a boast.

Where else is a spot where the fig and the pumpkin
Will grow side by side without water or care,
And each visitor feel as if he were some kin
To a God when he breathes the electrical air?

If a man has a hundred or two hundred handy,
He will buy a lot there, not a day will he wait,
For LEUCADIA the lovely, the darling, the dandy,
Is the brightest and neatest young town in the State.

For climate, for health, for beauty or business,
LEUCADIA we praise in Hexameters slow.
Let our readers with spi its elated to dizziness,
Attend at the auction and bid with a bow.

There are hundreds of thousands of acres of land in Los Angeles, San Bernardino and San Diego counties, suitable for orchards and vineyards.

But there is only one seaside, and only one LEUCADIA. There are hundreds of thousands of acres now dry and uncultivated, which can by labor be changed into garden orchards.

But there is only one strip of land which fronts the sea, only one fundamental chord upon which the surges of ocean sound their mighty diapason, only one place where Dame Nature wears her skirt of translucent beryl embroidered with foamy lace. And now here is this music-room and picture gallery of the Deity so attractive as at LEUCADIA.

Capital can construct reservoirs and flumes and railroads; it can make distant acres accessible, and cause arid acres to undulate with verdure.

But the wealth of Jay Gould could not bring the iodined healing breath of ocean to the bedside of the invalid in the hot valley, or add one yard to the present limited supply of ocean beach.

To say limited—go to the map and look!

All the seaside north of Santa Barbara may be eliminated from the list of available ocean-side property. The Japanese ocean current—the "Gulf Stream" of the Pacific, in its southward journey from Arctic waters hugs the shore closely from the Straits of Fuca to Point Concepcion. The result is cold water—too cold for comfortable bathing. Monterey, for instance, is in the latitude of Savannah, Georgia, but nine people out of ten who visit Monterey bathe in the big tanks where the water is warmed by artificial heat, and do not bathe in the ocean. As for Santa Cruz, there is a couplet written by some shivering pleasure seeker, on the walls of a bath-house there, which couplet accurately expresses the situation.

"Santa Cruz water is like the Scotch snuff,
One "dip," and you've got enough."

At Point Concepcion—just above Santa Barbara—the cold, ocean current continues southward in a direct course, while the Coast line deflects eastwardly at a sharp angle, and in a few miles the water, under the genial suns of this latitude, becomes warm enough to make bathing in any month of the y ar a real pleasure instead of "a painful duty reluctantly performed," as Millard Fillmore said when he signed the Fugitive Slave Law, and as Brigham Young remarked when he married his eighteenth wife.

From Santa Barbara south to Point Vicente, there is but little coast that is available for seaside resorts. The beach is too steep for driving, and the surf consequently too heavy to make bathing either pleasant or safe, while the bluff along the beach is several hundred feet in height, and cut up with arroyos, so as to make the ocean practically inaccessible to all except Alpine tourists and crows.

From Point Vicente to San Pedro are probably twenty of thirty miles of available beach, along which are the towns of Santa Monica, Ballona, Long Beach, etc. All these are upon the flat-table land which runs from the top of the bluff inland. There is no slope, and therefor no view of the ocean, except from the avenue along the very edge of the bluff. The beach is passable but not always desirable for driving, and the undertow is often heavy, so that surf-bathers are not safe unless they use the lines connected with buoys, anchored in deep water. And they do use them, for on a Sunday at Santa Monica, you can see twenty or thirty bathers attired in scant garments of many colors, strung along a rope, and as they resemble an immense animated kite-tale swaying in a high wind.

Below San Pedro there are only mud flats and lagoons, until San Juan by the sea is reached. This place is open to the same objections as Santa Monica. There is an extremely high bluff and a table land from the bluff inland, and from only one street on the edge of the bluff can an ocean view be obtained. Leaving San Juan, there is no ground available for a seaside resort until the mouth of Temecula Cañon is crossed and Oceanside reached. At Oceanside, the direct road from Los Angeles to San Diego, now in process of construction, will connect with the California Southern Railroad from Colton to San Diego. Oceanside lots are held at good figures, fifteen hundred dollars for a lot on the Ocean avenue and five hundred dollars for resident lots a mile and more from the beach. South of Oceanside is the Agua Hedionda. It has several miles of fine seaside, but the owner is able to keep it, he will not sell at any price, and if you annoy him with an attempt to talk about selling, he will make the interview as brief as may be consistent with courtesy. Then comes Carlsbad, and it is a beautiful location, and there will be a large town there, and prices of lots are already away up, as they ought to be. From Carlsbad south there are lagoons, sand dunes and broken ground until you reach the mouth of the San Marcos. From the San Marcos south to Encenitas is the prettiest site in the world for an ocean city, and on this site is "Leucadia"—the subject of our sketch. Encinitas has a good location, but somehow it started wrong. The ownership of the land is divided between many men of many minds. When one pulls in any particular direction the other pulls the other way. There being no company or central authority to carry out public improvements, the result is a lack of hotel accommodations, no water works, and an assortment of shrines to Cloacina, beer kegs, tin cans and broken bottles about the depot, or the place where the depot ought to be. The Encinitas people will fix these things after awhile, but they must fix them before Encinitas can take her proper place among seaside towns. South of Encinitas there is some broken country, then the lagoons of the San Diegito, and then comes delightful Delmar with most of the best localities not for sale, or held at high prices.

Delmar ends the list. There the railroad leaves the coast, and with the exception of La Jolla and Ocean Beach, both of which are at present approached only by wagon, there is no more seaside until you reach San Diego and Coronado.

Now we will return to LEUCADIA.

South of the San Marcos River, an hour and a half from San Diego, and about four hours from Los Angeles (after January 1st next, when the new branch of the A. T. and S. F. R. R. shall be completed,) Leucadia lies in the lap of Paradise. She is the fairest of all the fair daughters of the sea. She is the venus amphidite of Southern California. The beach is hard and level. You can drive along it for twelve miles. For bathing there is no need of lines, for the surf is so light it would not upset a baby, and there being no lagoons near there are in consequence no stingrays. From the edge of the bluff over, hanging the beach the ground slopes gently up to the top of the first ridge, then it descends gently to a valley, through which the railroad runs, then there is a gradual axent to the top of the second ridge a mile or so away. Here is a rough sketch of the gable end of Leucadia.

There are lots fronting on and overhanging the ocean, and lots sheltered from the ocean breezes, and lots on the upper terraces where you can see the ocean for forty miles, but where its fogs never come and its breezes are robbed of their rawness.

CATARRH.

THE TERM CATARRH IS APPLIED TO A peculiar disorder of the nostrils and adjacent parts, which prevails to an alarming extent, and is productive of very serious consequences.

The most prominent and characteristi, feature is a morbid discharge from the head varying in its nature at different times.

In some there is an almost constant flow of clear, acrid fluid, but oftener an offensive, purulent or muco-purulent, greenish-yellow matter is secreted, which accumulates in the nostrils or drops into the throat, necessitating its frequent removal by blowing the nose or expectoration, and often by both processes. Sometimes patients feel as though their head was in a state of rottenness, so great is the amount of matter discharged and so fetid is its odor. The patient is greatly annoyed by the constant dropping into the throat of the morbid matter from the head, and as a recumbent position naturally favors the flow downward his rest is frequently disturbed from this cause. Many sufferers are obliged to lie with the head very much elevated in order to sleep with some degree of comfort.

In others a tough, viscid and offensive phlegm collects behind and above the soft palate, in the passage between the throat and head, adhering to the parts with a glutish tenacity. Its lodgment embarrasses respiration and creates a sensation of irritation and uneasiness in the affected locality, which gives rise to a constant and almost irresistible desire to relieve that discomfort by drawing the mucus into the throat so as to eject it by the mouth. This practice, popularly known as "hawking," is characteristic of catarrh, and proves as embarrassing to the one affected as it is disagreeable to those around him.

Again, the offensive matter hardens and deposits itself on the membrane in the shape of dry, hard concretions, which are discharged by way of the nostrils or throat in lumps or fragments of a deep green tint. In some cases these incrustations accumulate to such an extent as to form a regular plug in the nose, which obstructs breathing and produce serious discomfort. So firmly do these incrustations adhere to the point of attachment that their removal usually requires the most violent efforts; not unfrequently they have to be torn from the membrane. Occasionally a solid cast of notable size is expelled, on which there are generally traces of blood, but in some cases the cast presents a tubular appearance, being of exact shape of the nasal cavity. This condition is indicative of ulceration, which, in time, may destroy the bony structure of the nose and produce a subsequent flattening of that organ.

Cases are occasionally met with in which a thick, viscid, slimy secretion coats the membrane of the nasal cavities and then putrefies, giving rise to a stench which is really overpowering, and sufficiently fetid to poison the atmosphere of a whole room; and there are others in which all the secretions of the membrane are suspended, causing an unpleasant feeling of dryness, heat and feverishness in the head and nose—a condition popularly known as "Dry Catarrh."

The disease speedily extends to the air cavities of the bones of the forehead and face, giving rise to a distressing sensation of heavy weight or compression over the forehead, especially in the region above and between the eyes, and to a feeling of fulness, heat, irritation, soreness or pain in the nostrils near the root of the nose, as well as in the upper part of the throat, above and behind the soft palate. Sometimes there is pain obstinately fixed in some particular part, as in the temple, on the top of the head, at the back of the neck, or behind the orbits, and, occasionally, pain manifests itself in the face of so severe a character that it is frequently mistaken for neuralgia.

The breath is always tainted, and at times assumes an exceeding fetid and sickening odor. In some cases it becomes so revoltingly offensive as to render the sufferer an object of disgust to himself as well as to others.

The nasal membrane is thickened and conjested, causing the nose to be stopped up, sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other, and often on both, giving rise to a disagreeable, stuffy sensation in the head, and occasioning violent and prolonged paroxysms of sneezing.

The voice is weak, indistinct and husky, or of a nasal character, displaying a sort of sniffing quality. Oftentimes there is a continuous hoarseness and discordance. There is also a sense of irritation in the part, and frequent attempts to clear the throat of phlegm, producing the sound "hem," more or less forcibly. In some cases patients complain of an uncomfortable feeling of fullness, or a choky sensation in the throat, and in others of a distressing and almost constant dryness, for the temporary relief of which they have to swallow frequently. Others; again, speak of a constant bad or nauseous taste in the mouth or throat.

The stomach generally suffers more or less and becomes weak and irritable: the appetite is capricious and nearly always bad in the morning. The patient is languid, unable to perform mental or physical labor with the usual facility, is nervous, depressed in spirits, at times fearful, timid, agitated and inclined to drowsiness and sleep, the memory weakened and permanent impairment seriously threatened.

The mucous membrane soon becomes morbidly sensitive to unfavorable influences, and in spite of the utmost care becomes affected from the slightest causes, so that at last a breath of wind upon the lining of the nose or throat becomes productive of a cold, and gives rise to serious disturbances of the respiratory organs. Thus the patient is subject to frequent and repeated colds, each attack aggravating the disease by giving it a new impulse and involving a larger extent of surface than its predecessor. In this manner the difficulty spreads from organ to organ, invading the throat, larnyx, trachea and bronchial tubes, until, encroaching further and further, it reaches the finer ramifications of the bronchi, when but a slight impulse is required to send it to the lungs. Catarrh may, and often does, affect other organs in the body, especially those containing a mucous membrane, such as the stomach, bowels, kidneys, etc.

By the employment of proper inhalations in the form of medicated vapor (not steam or spray) we are able to produce immediate and direct action upon the diseased surface in the pharynx and nasal passages, for air will find its way into the most remote and intricate cavities, where it is utterly impossible to make fluid applications. By these means every case can be cured.

Persons desiring treatment by this system of practice can use the remedy at home as well as at our office, and which will cause no inconvenience or hindrance to business whatever.

I have seen so many of these cases cured that I do not consider any case hopeless unless the disease has advanced to the chest and that both lungs are seriously involved. Even then the inhalations aid us in dissolving the mucus and in contracting and healing the cavities, which nothing else can do with the same success. The very best references from those already cured.

CONSULTATION FREE.

Those who desire to consult with me in regard to their cases had better call at the office for consultation and examination, but, if impossible to do so, can write for a copy of my Medical Treatise, containing a list of questions. Address

LOS ANGELES DAILY HERALD.

VOL XXVII. SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 2, 1887.—SIXTEEN PAGES—PART II: PAGES 9 TO 16. NO. 180.

We Too.

We were both of us, ay! we were both of us there,
In the self-same house at the play together;
To her it was summer, with bees in the air,
To me it was winter weather.

We never had met, and yet we two
Had played in desperate woman fashion
A game of life with a price in view;
But, ah! I played with passion.

'Twas a game that meant heaven and sweet home life
For the one who went forth with a crown upon her:
For the one that lost it meant love, strife,
Sorrow, despair and dishonor.

Well, she won, Yet it was not she—
I am told she is a praying woman;
No earthly power could outwit me,
But here was superhuman.

She has the prize, and I have—well
Memories sweeter than the joys of heaven:
Memories fierce as the fires of hell,
These unto me are given.

And we sat in the self-same room last night,
And he was there. It is no error
When I say (and it gives me keen delight)
That his eyes met mine with terror.

When the love that we have won at any cost
Has grown familiar, as the old, old story,
Naught seems so dear as the love we lost,
All bright with the heart's weird glory.

And though he is fond of that woman, I know
I saw in his eyes the brief confession
That the love seemed sweeter which he let go
Than the one in his possession.

So I am content. I would be the same
Were I winner, love-crowned and petted,
And she the woman who lost the game;
Then she were the one regretted.

And loving him so, I would rather be
The one he let go and then vaguely desired,
Than mourning him once, in his face to see
The look of a love grown tired.

—ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

THE CIRCUS BLACKS.

[Charlotte Adams in the Epoch.]

The first time I saw Pussy Black she was tobogganing in a butler's tray down the golden stairs of the Mansion House at San Francisco. As tobogganing was not at that time a fashionable pastime in the States, I concluded that Miss Pussy had evolved this novel amusement from the depths of her own mischievous consciousness. Being a sad and promiscuous flirt even at the age of ten, she had doubtless done the Delilah act by the head waiter in order to obtain possession of the butler's tray.

However this may have been, her tobogganing was scarcely a success. She bumped, bumped, bumped down half a dozen stairs with a delighted grin on her small countenance. Then alas! a yell and a shriek, a vision of long red legs and flying yellow hair, a rapidly descending confusion of youthful anatomy—and another bump. This time it was Pussy's head that came in contact with the hard floor at the foot of the stairs.

I asked the youngster where she was hurt as she lay back in my arms with closed eyes, and she touched one dimpled hand to her forehead. The chambermaid brought water and I bathed the poor forehead, and then I kissed it again, because I somehow thought that Miss Pussy liked being kissed by a grown-up moustache. I kissed her the third time because I rather liked the performance myself.

A coquettish smile appeared on Pussy's rosy mouth and my vanity took alarm. I felt that the little flirt was deliberately leading me on. I turned the injured innocent over to the tender mercies of the chambermaid and sallied forth to keep a business appointment connected with the mining interest that had brought me to California.

A few days later I was at a party given to celebrate the birthday of a little girl who was the only daughter of one of the richest mining men in San Francisco. It was a good old-fashioned American party, where old and young mingled in the Virginia reel and round the festive bowl—of lemonade. I came across a very agreeable woman of handsome middle presence, who knew her California like a book and told me who all the queer people were. Sure of her own pedigree, which was of the best South Carolina brand, she could afford to be cynical on the subject of Pacific coast ancestry. She watched the new arrivals through an imposing tortoise-shell eyeglass and checked them off one by one for my benefit in a vein of gentle sarcasm.

"Aha! Here comes the circus Blacks," says Mrs. Penderlip, calling my attention to a group proceeding toward us from the door. What superb diamonds Mrs. Black wears! And just to think that her mother used to drive a market wagon into San Francisco every morning with a pipe in her mouth and her head tied up in a red handkerchief. I've bought many a cauliflower of her myself."

"Why do you call them the 'circus' Blacks?" I asked.

"Everybody knows them by that name—partly, I suppose, because they act and dress as if they belonged to a circus, and I have heard a legend to the effect that Mrs. Black once traveled with a circus. Black first saw her when she was performing her great bareback feat on a couple of wild steeds of the prairies at Sacramento City, where he kept a tailor's shop. He got into mines after he was married, and that's how he made his money."

At this moment the circus Blacks swept by us in solemn and stately procession. There really was something about them that suggested the "grand entree" of a well regulated circus company opening the performance, the crack of the ring master's whip being represented by the sarcastic click of Mrs. Penderlip's eyeglass.

Mr. Black was a short stout man with a stubby beard. His bald spot just came up to Mrs. Black's magnificent diamond lecklace. Mrs. Black was unquestionably a fine figure of a woman. Plump, black haired, rosy cheeked, in her yellow satin train almost covered with point lace, and, with the upper portion of her vigorous frame dressed chiefly in diamonds, she looked like the very goddess of bullion.

Behind Mr. and Mrs. Black walked two little girls. One was about fourteen, dark, plain and scowling, dressed in pea-green silk, with her hair in pigtails and a horrible red coral necklace reposing on her collar-bone like the marks of the hangman's rope. The younger girl was blonde, smiling and coquettish. The real Valenciennes petticoat arrangement which she wore over a light blue silk slip stopped short above her knees. Her infantile and very bare bosom sustained several rows of costly pearls, and in her ears she had large single diamonds, which gleamed against her yellow locks like the lantern of an honest miner against the walls of a productive gold mine.

I am only a man and consequently not posted in details of female attire, but I gathered the impression that the younger Miss Black was, to put it mildly, insufficiently clad. I was glad for her sake that the room was warm. Apparently my views were shared by Mrs. Penderlip.

"Just look at Pussy Black!" she exclaimed, in a horrified tone.

"She looks like a ballet girl or a circus rider. The story about her mother must be true. They say blood will tell. Those long silk stockings fit like tights."

Miss Pussy Black turned her pretty head at that moment and caught my admiring eye. She smiled, in sweet and not displeased surprise, and I recognized the interesting young heroine of the amateur tobogganing episode.

When the royal progress of the circus Blacks was over, when Pussy's papa was taking his whisky straight in company with other mining millionaires in a retired corner of the palatial mansion, when Pussy's mamma was discussing servants' wages with the proudest matronage of glorious California, I looked for Miss Pussy with intent to claim her hand in the giddy waltz. I found her sitting in a corner with a dozen youthful dandies in pumps and frizzes about her. She was queening it with a right good will, and there wasn't a female creature within twenty feet of her. She had learned thus early to dispense with chaperons.

Miss Pussy affected indifference toward me at first with a coquetry that was quite mature, but her vanity was presently kindled by the thought of being the object of grown up attendants, and the little dancing school boys were sent about their business. We danced and flirted, and pulled those snapping turtle things which do perennial duty at children's parties, and exchanged mottoes, and even pledged each other in champagne. I hinted to Miss Pussy that I should like to make the acquaintance of her mother in order to be able to call upon herself. Pussy only opened her blue eyes wide and said, demurely:

"Oh, you needn't see ma. I have plenty of gentlemen calling on me. Ma's generally out shopping in the daytime. If she's in we can sit in the hall. The chambermaid in the hotel lets me do everything I want to, because I gave her my turquoise earrings. I was tired of 'em. They weren't fashionable any more."

When I returned to my hotel I found a telegram summoning me to the East. I left San Francisco the next day. Before I went I sent to Miss Pussy Black the finest box of sugar plums that the city of the golden gate could supply. Following so closely on the heels of a children's party, this gift would have been indeed a fatal one to most infants. But observation had convinced me that Miss Pussy had the stomach of an ostrich, and I was certain that she was the sort of a child to come up smiling after every round of sweetstuff.

Eight years passed before I again saw Pussy. I was at Rome. I came up from Naples and went to a hotel-pension behind the Pantheon, which was a famous resort for genteel widows and spinsters who were passing their declining winter days at the Eternal City. At my first dinner I counted no less than twenty women of uncertain age, sandwiched in among forlorn young girls and sickly men. The black looks that were cast upon me by three lean British spinsters who sat opposite to me did not improve my appetite; they all wore soiled white knitted shawls and wrangled among themselves on the subject of church architecture. At my left was an American maiden lady who had dyed, yellow hair. I heard later that she was going over to the church of Rome. At my right sat a portly dame with a Roman profile and iron gray hair. Her face was singularly familiar. She raised her shell eyeglass and gazed with quiet sarcasm upon the corpse of a puny little bird which rested from its joys and sorrow upon her plate. Her gesture reminded me of certain California festivities in which I had once participated and I recognized the lady who had told me the tale of the "Circus Blacks."

"Is this Mrs. Penderlip?" I asked, at length.

She turned and looked at me with ready amiability, after the European table d'hote manner.

"I have met you somewhere," she said pleasantly, "but I cannot recall time and place."

I reminded Mrs. Penderlip of the half-hour's chat we had had eight years before at the home of the California mining man, and I asked her what had become of the "Circus Blacks."

"They are here at Rome," said Mrs. Penderlip, "and in high feather. They move in court circles, thanks to Pussy's beauty and her flirtations with poverty-stricken noblemen. I see a good deal of them. I never even recognized them in California. I couldn't, you know. But over here it is different. Money is all that counts with the Italians. They think all Americans are plebeians. Mrs. Black is very glad to have me vouch for her pedigree. I never say anything about the bareback act, or the market garden, or the tailor's shop, and it wouldn't make any difference if I did. I like Mrs. Black's opera box and her good dinners—the dinners at this house grow worse every day—and she thinks me an excellent chaperone for her Pussy. Even girls like Pussy Black have to be chaperoned at times in this scandal-loving city. The New York and Boston women turn up their noses at the Blacks, but there isn't a girl in the American colony as handsome as Pussy, and with her money she ought to marry well. The other daughter, Ella, is married and lives at San Francisco. Nowadays the tops are all getting to the bottom and the bottoms to the top."

Mrs. Penderlip had evidently mellowed with age. She informed me, pleasantly that she had met with financial reverses and was practicing social amiability as a profession. Mrs. Penderlip a few days later offered to take me to call upon the Blacks, assuring me that Pussy remembered me with pleasure, and had expressed herself as delighted to renew the acquaintance.

"They live at the Hotel d'Angelterre," said Mrs. Penderlip, as we crossed the plaza of the Pantheon. "That sort of people never have a home."

We had just entered the vestibule of the hotel and were giving our cards to the flunkey in red plush and gold lace when a tremendous rattling and rushing was heard, a swishing of silk draperies, a clanking of spurs and swords, and, tearing headlong down the length of the wide crimson-carpeted staircase with the flowering camelia trees on either side, came a lovely, graceful girl, dragging a long dark blue train after her. She was covered with jet ornaments, that made a noise as of falling hailstones. Her beautiful face was shaded by a cavalier's hat, with long, drooping, dark blue plumes. It was Pussy Black. She took her stairs as rapidly as of old.

Behind her skipped one of those suburb specimens of Italian military manhood that decorate the thoroughfares of Rome and do so much to make the Eternal City attractive to American young women. He was a handsome youth, and with his long black and yellow legs, his shining accoutrements and his neatly corseted figure he reminded one of the brilliant dragon-fly hovering over an exquisite flower.

Pussy greeted me cordially, and was extremely sorry that an engagement for a walk with Count Castelnuovo, who she presented to me, would prevent her remaining at home that afternoon; but her mamma—she no longer said "ma"—was up-stairs and would be charmed to see me. Then she danced off into the sunlight, under the arched doorway, accompanied by her count, and all the gentlemen came out of the reading-room with their Galignani and Times in their hands to see the pretty American girl whisk herself into the street.

Mrs. Black was very gracious to me. She had acquired artistic tastes since her arrival at Rome, and was studying sculpture. I won her affections by praising a bust of her husband, which she had just finished. I ingratiated myself with Mr. Black by sympathizing with his desire to give up all this foreign nonsense and go back to dear old California. He hated absinthe and vermouth, and his wife wouldn't let him drink whiskey. She said that it was "low." Mrs. Black was a perfect godsend to the starving artists who infest Rome. They regarded her in the light of a valuable Alderney cow that gave milk freely, and her rooms were filled with charity pictures.

The Blacks had been presented at the Quirinal, and went to all the court balls. King Umberto had pronounced Pussy bellina, as indeed she was, and Queen Marguerite had smiled graciously on the whole family. Pussy had in her train a large number of young men belonging to the French, Italian and Russian nobility. The few American men who represented "society" at Rome that winter rather sneered at her. Some Englishmen residing in the city considered her "a very odd girl, you know," although they all admired her beauty. But they were frightened off at last by her sharp little tongue. Pussy had a keen eye for a fortune hunter, and she did not take kindly to the British variety of that class.

Judge of my delight, my surprise, and my hope, when Pussy Black singled me out from among her circle of adorers to be the trusted companion of her daily walks, her favorite partner at the balls, her general utility man and her cavalier at the Campagna hunts. After several weeks of this kind of treatment I arrived at the conclusion that Miss Black returned the love I felt for her.

There came an evening so full of tender glances, of sweet and subtle smiles, of delicate and wonderful witchery, that my whole life and destiny seemed to lie in the hollow of a girl's dimpled hand. It was a beautiful little hand. Cased in a long glove, the dainty hand lay lightly, like a light flower, upon the black coats of Pussy's partners. The Quirinal ball-room had never seen a lovelier presence than Pussy Black as she appeared that evening. There were crowds of white tulle about her, caught up with white water-lilies, and lily buds peeped lovingly from under the golden-knot that lay low on her graceful head. Not one of the princisesse, duchesse and contesse who glanced at her with veiled, well-bred contempt from under their haughty eyelids could compare with her for beauty or charm. They were mortally jealous of her. Princess Ghigi went so far as to refuse Pussy's hand in the grand chain of the lancers. On the other hand, some of the most magnificent male grandes of Rome laid themselves beneath the little white slippered feet of the California girl. Pussy seemed to say to me with her eyes, "All this triumph and success and homage are for you." She danced the cotillion with me and Count Castelnuovo, who led it, looked stilletos and vendetta. The supreme moment of my life came when I found myself alone for a moment with Pussy in a pale blue satin alcove lined with shining mirrors that gave back the reflection of her slender white figure. I had just cloaked her with a marvelous hooded mantle of white feathers, and her blue eyes looked up into mine like forget-me-nots springing from under a snowdrift. Coquette as she was, there was no coquetry in that glance.

Just then a loud laugh in the corridor broke the silence. I hurried Pussy out of the alcove and found Mrs. Black waiting with Count Castelnuovo at the head of the stairs, among the palm trees. Mrs. Black looked brilliantly handsome and rather vulgar. She wore an uncommonly self-satisfied expression.

"Mr. Bruce," said the ex-circus rider, imperiously, "will you give me your arm and let Count Castelvuovo escort my daughter?"

Pussy reminded me of a beautiful great white bird as she skipped down the stairs before me in her feather cloak, with Count Castelnuovo playing the part of a hungry fortune-hunting hawk.

I had barely seated myself at Mrs. Penderlip's side at the pension dinner table on the following evening when that good lady put up her eye-glass and looked at me inquisitively. "I suppose you've heard the news?" she said.

"The old news? the Wall street panic? That happened two weeks ago!"

"No. Pussy Black's engagement to Count Castelnuovo."

The blow fell with cruel force. I kept my countenance, but I was badly hit.

"I thought Mrs. Black was playing for a title," said Mrs. Penderlip. "She announced the engagement to all her friends this afternoon. I heard it dis-

HE KILLED HER FATHER.

A Girl Whose Greatest Benefactor Was the Man Who Orphaned Her.

An Edgefield (S. C.) special says: The death of Colonel W. R. Smith, which took place in New York a few weeks since, has brought to light a very remarkable incident. From Miss Rhett Myron, the principal figure in the drama, the following facts have been obtained, with permission for their publication: Hayne Myron, the father of the young lady, was a planter in South Carolina. His home was a typical Southern home, spacious and hospitable, surrounded by broad acres and faithful slaves. His family consisted of his wife and Rhett, who was then a little child and the idol of her father as well as the pet of the plantation. At the breaking out of the war, in the fall of 1861, Hayne Myron joined a volunteer South Carolina regiment. Before leaving home he had a picture of his little girl painted in miniature and encased it in a locket that he placed next to his heart, saying: "My darling, this will be papa's shield when he is in danger, and his sunshine when he rests," and with eyes filled with tears he smothered the face and sunny head of his child with farewell kisses and hurried away from his peaceful home out to the world of danger. Six months later, in a skirmish in Virginia, Hayne Myron was killed in close combat by a Federal officer. Only a few words were sent to the old home to tell the sad story.

During General Sherman's invasion into South Carolina the Myron homestead was destroyed. The widow and daughter continued to live on the plantation in an outbuilding, supported from the rents from the lands. Two years ago Mrs. Myron died, and through the influence of friends Miss Myron obtained a position as governess in the family of Col. W. R. Smith of New York. She stated to me that first meeting with Colonel Smith was peculiar. That when his wife introduced her to him, saying, "This is our new governess from South Carolina, Miss Rhett Myron," his face became deathly white, and he gave a sudden start. (He was absent from home when Mrs. Smith engaged her.) He mechanically shook hands with her and tried to speak, but his lips seemed sealed. But later his manners changed to kindness and cordiality, and she was treated more as an honored guest than a salaried teacher. He insisted on paying her four times the amount she charged for her services, and made her duties light. One evening she was sitting in the family circle, telling of her past life down in South Carolina, of the spacious house with its twenty columns, of the dusky slaves who used to set her on their shoulders, calling her their "little queen" as they carried her through the cotton-fields that looked like seas of snow foam. For the first time she spoke of her father, how handsome and sad he looked as he went away on that dreadful day; how he took her picture with him and told all he said. She states that she was forced to stop in the midst of her words, for Col. Smith turned ghastly pale and left the room. It all seemed strange to me then, she said, but the meaning is plain now. Miss Myron continued to live with Col. Smith's family for two years. "It was a haven and a home to me," she said. "I had so long toiled and worked on our plantation, isolated from society and all advantages. It was like a fairy life had opened to me of ease and luxury; but my heart was almost breaking as I remembered all that I had lost in those sad, sweet days."

Six weeks ago Colonel Smith was taken suddenly ill, and when he realized that death was inevitable, he expressed a desire to see Miss Myron alone. She states that as she neared the bed of the dying man, she saw him holding something convulsively in one hand as he extended the other to her and exclaimed: "Rhett Myron, forgive me before I die; without your pardon I cannot die; come close and listen to what I have to tell you. It was I who made you an orphan, my hands are red with your father's blood. Take this," he said, handing me the package, "I found it on his dying breast. It is your face; your name and his name are upon it. Take it and forgive one who has tried to expiate the wrongs done you. Oh, can you forgive a dying man?" and the voice became faint and low. "Oh! sir, you both were soldiers; I freely forgive," and the poor girl, who could say no more, fell unconscious upon the floor. "Thank God," he murmured, and all was over.

When Rhett Myron recovered, the man who had killed her father and who was later the best friend she ever knew was dead. In his will he bequeathed to her the generous sum of $15,000. He also left a letter giving all the particulars of her father's death. Only a few days ago I saw the picture—a sweet child face in an azure cloud, and on the little plush case were marks of blood. This is certainly the most remarkable incident it has ever been my privilege to record.—[Washington Star.

Rosebuds in a Divorce Suit.

The dreary monotony of a divorce case was dragging its soiled length along in Judge Hicks' Court, recently. The woeful contestants were listening eagerly when a handsome, broad-shouldered youth entered the room, with a lady on his arm. He was overflowing with joy. His face was constantly wreathed in smiles, which seemed to fill the court room. She was happy, too—bashfully, surreptiously happy—and she looked shyly from behind her stalwart lover's arm.

They wanted to be married. The divorce suit was suspended at once, for the Court will stop unmaking a marriage to make one at any time. The ceremony was performed. The young man drew out a $5-bill and placed it before the Judge. With his brightest smile and a speech as gallant as a Chesterfield could make, he presented it to the bride. The little lady accepted the money, and with a quick, graceful movement, she drew the bouquet of roses from her bosom and placed it before the Judge. With a bow he received the rosebuds, and a few minutes later he returned to the divorce but the sweet odor pervaded the Courtroom all that day.—[Minneapolis Journal.

Scenes at Executions.

No one can pity the despicable coward who, having murdered his victim in cold blood, crouches in horror before the scaffold on which the penalty of the crime is to be paid; but it is discreditable to our administration of justice that the execution of the last dread sentence of the law should be the occasion of a scene in which the malefactor has to be "half-dragged and half-carried by five warders" to his doom, and when on the scaffold struggles so violently that the executioner has difficulty in performing his hideous task and is "quite unnerved." We cannot desire that the punishment of death—so long as it is inflicted for deterrent purposes—should be shorn of its terrors to the public mind; but we do most certainly think that there should be no room or occasion for scandal in connection with its infliction, and it is a scandal that the victim should be able to recoil or resist. Electricity and the lethal chamber have been again and again suggested as alternative methods of putting murderers to death. The authorities do not, it would appear, feel justified in adopting either of these expedients. We confess that our sympathies are with those who entertain a fear lest luxurious and easy modes of execution might deprive the gallows of the very little moral influence it at present exerts. Meanwhile it must not be forgotten that something is due to the sentiment of humanity which is supposed to pervade that section of the nation which is not, at least overtly, criminal.—[The Lancet.

A MEXICAN HEAVEN.

An Able Jurist's Wonderful Story of a Long-Lived Race of People.

Readers of the Globe-Democrat who have been following its columns concerning very old people will be interested in statements recently made by Don Ignacio Galindo while in San Antonio. Don Galindo is one of the ables jurists in Mexico, a member of the Supreme Court of that Republic, widely known all through its territory, and, of course, of unimpeachable veracity. He spent some days here renewing old acquaintances among Mexican citizens, and left this morning for the City of Mexico. Those who met him found him a very companionable old gentleman. Two days ago, on the veranda of the hotel, the conversation turned upon human longevity, when Judge Galindo gave the following account of a remarkable section and a remarkable race within the borders of his own land:

"There is," said he, "in the State of Vera Cruz, 120 miles to the northwest of the capital of that name, a portion of country which its inhabitants denominate El Cielo, or as you would say in English, 'Heaven.' They gave it this name because of its peculiar climatic conditions. The air, the water, the elevation, in fact the whole environment, is peculiarly conducive to length of human life. The instances of logevity furnished by its records are perfectly wonderful, some of them surpassing belief. Many have come under my observation. For instance, one of the oldest men in the section recently died. His name was Jesus Valdonado, a farmer and ranchman of considerable possessions. This man's age at the time of his death was indisputably 154 years, which, if I am not mistaken, goes considerably beyond the celebrated Dr. Parr, of London. At Valdonado's funeral the pall-bearers were his three sons, aged respectively 140, 120 and 110 years. They were white-haired, but strong and hearty. Not so with the dead man, who, during his last twenty years of life, had broken down rapidly. At the time of death he was wrinkled, hairless, toothless, deaf and well-nigh blind, and much decreased in size, in fact, a male copy of Haggard's 'She' after she came out of the fire and resolved herself into the missing link between a chimpanzee and Concord philosopher. By comparison of age you will see that when Valdonado's eldest child was born he himself was only fourteen years of age, something by no means uncommon in Southern Mexico. Furthermore, owing, I suppose, to early puberty and child-bearing, I recollect no instance of a woman reaching an excessive age.

"Near the El Cielo district, thirty miles away, and separated from it by a chain of mountains, is a circumscribed area of lowland which possesses exactly opposite attributes, and which is called El Inferno. There forty years make an old man of the strongest.

"In Peru," continued Judge Galindo, "ever since its settlement by the Spaniards, exact church and civil records have been kept of each birth and death. These records are absolutely unquestionable. I have had many opportunities of examining them, and have made copies of some of the most interesting. I find in them some instances of human beings reaching the well-nigh incredible age of 200 years and over. I do not ask you to believe that these records are correct. I myself know that they are correct. I tell you that in my own country, which has been but little explored, there are examples of human longevity which would upset every preconceived notion of the savant."—[San Antonio letter to St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

OAKLAND,

THE BEAUTIFUL!

California abounds in choice residence locations, but of them all Oakland and vicinity is incomparably the finest. It has every advantage. Its climate is most enjoyable, being never uncomfortably warm nor disagreeably cool. Its many charming drives, its beautiful lawns embowered in a perfect wealth of ever blooming flowers, and its magnificent, soul-inspiring views are the wonder and admiration of all travelers. In healthfulness it surpasses all cities of the United States, its death rate averaging only 14 per 1000. Its educational facilities are thorough and complete, embracing all classes from the lowest grades to the State University, and far surpassing those of any other location on the coast. Then it is within 30 minutes of San Francisco and has half-hourly and splendid communication therewith. Furthermore, it is backed and surrounded by the finest country in the world. A section that produces all the grains, fruits and nuts of the temperate and semi-tropic zones, in finest quality and richest abundance

WITHOUT IRRIGATION!

Its advantages as a manufacturing site are drawing to it many of the chief industries of the State. And it is the natural and inevitable terminus of all transcontinental railroads entering the State. Finally, though rising in value, land is still cheap compared with locations of much less merit, and thus for homes or investment presents splendid opportunities.

DAILY HERALD.

FRUIT IN PLENTY.

Wonderful Growth of the California Trade.

HOW THE MARKET IS SUPPLIED

The Facts and Figures of Success—Bright Prospects Ahead.

Peaches, pears, plums, grapes, apricots—one sees them in rich profusion at almost every street corner through the city. Great piles of the magnificent fruit tempt the passer-by at every step, and the markets are full of the produce of every section of the country.

In the winter apples, oranges and bananas take the place of the summer fruits, and the great trade goes on.

Where does all this fruit come from and what are the features of the trade to-day?

A thousand interesting facts about the different kinds of fruit, the sources from which they come, the condition in which they arrive and the manner of their distribution to the thousands of buyers in New York alone are not generally known to the public which consumes them.

There is no greater fruit market in the world than the United States, and probably no single city buys so much as New York. Americans of all classes devour fruit in a quantity perfectly astonishing to the benighted stranger who comes here from foreign lands.

THE CALIFORNIA TRADE.

The first great fact to strike any one interested in the city's fruit trade of to-day is the immense increase in the amount of fruit received here from California. As late as last year this fruit did not come here at all, except in small packages by express from Chicago. Now the enormous, magnificently appearing peaches and pears are to be found with the domestic fruit upon every corner stand.

Why this change? Because at the beginning of the present summer the fruit growers belonging to the California Fruit Union found that immense quantities of their best fruit were rotting upon the trees for lack of a market. Something had to be done and that at once. It was no longer a question of getting good prices; it was a question of selling at any price rather than submit to the dead loss of decay.

Accordingly the California growers engaged Messrs. Sgobel & Day, the large fruit importers, as their agents in this city, and began sending East a train consisting of ten car loads of fruit every day. All of these cars did not come here; some went to Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities, but two or three car loads have come regularly during the summer to New York.

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS,

All the local firms shook their heads at the new departure.

"They will soon discover that they can't compete with the domestic trade," said one of the home merchants.

But the agents were not discouraged. The fruit arrived in good condition except in the middle of the hottest July weather, when some of the peaches and apricots were badly bruised and rotton. The splendid appearance of the fruit was another point in its favor, everybody who wished to make a show upon the dinner table being sure to purchase it. The warm climate of California, of course, enabled the growers to send their produce to the Eastern market before the domestic fruits were fairly ready for distribution.

But the daily through freight trains were no sooner started than a difficulty was discovered which threatened to play havoc with the prospective profits. This was that bugbear to so many professions, the Interstate Commerce law. The freight rates under it were so large that the necessity for remedial measures became apparent. Fortunately for the California trade, a way was discovered which has continued to work satisfactorily. The way is this: The fruit is shipped from Sacramento to Chicago as freight. From Chicago to New York it is carried in the same cars and disturbed in no way, but it is sent by express—not as freight. The excessive freight charges are in this way avoided, and the freight rates are now only one-third as great as they had been before this season.

ALL SOLD BY AUCTION.

So far forty-five carloads of California fruit have been received here this summer by the agents of the Union, and there are all the time more on the way. It takes six days and a half for the journey overland, and the sending is arranged so that the fruit may not arrive on Saturday or Sunday, when it would have to wait a day or two before it could be sold.

All the fruit coming from the Union growers is disposed of at auction, and the sale usually takes place upon the day of its arrival here. Like all the other fruit disposed of at auction, it is sold through the firm of Brown & Seccomb, which has a monopoly of the trade.

A visit to the salesroom of this firm on the corner of Broad and Beaver streets on a morning when a big load of California fruit is up for sale is an interesting experience. The fruit is all spread out in boxes before the auctioneer's stand. Before the sale begins the fruit-dealers who have come to buy go about to each box, examining the condition and quality of the fruit. Each separate pear, peach, quince or apricot is wrapped up in paper and is carefully guarded from bruising. The packers, however, occasionally make mistakes and put two different kinds of peaches in the same lot. The freestones are considered better than the clings, and the dealers do not like to have them mixed. Some of the pears arriving now are in a capital condition for immediate consumption, but are not green enough to admit of being kept for any length of time.

THE FAMOUS TOKAY GRAPES.

The Tokay grapes, which are now beginning to arrive from California, will continue to come up to the middle of October. They are a splendid fruit, and come to market in time to compete with the Jersey, upriver and Western New York fruit. The California crop this year is not considered a large one, but there is plenty for everybody, and the acknowledged superiority of this grape is sure to give it a large sale.

The grapes, like the other fruit, come in open ventilated cars and arrive in excellent condition. They will soon be he only fruit arriving from California, as the season for the other fruits is drawing quickly to a close.

On the whole, the California Union is delighted with the results of its experiment of a New York agency, and they intend to keep it up next summer, with every prospect of doing a still more satisfactory business.

WHAT OTHER DEALERS SAY.

The only other dealers who do much "handling" of California fruit are the firm of Dudley, Clapp & Doe, who have for years received the fruit by express from Chicago.

Mr. Doe says that a limited quantity of the fruit can be disposed of at good prices, but that a large proportion arrives in a wretched condition and has the effect of demoralizing the market. The street dealers get hold of the fruit purchased by those who attend the auctions and scatter it abroad at ruinous prices.

Mr. Doe was not of the opinion that the Fruit Union could make a permanent success of its Eastern market. He and Mr. George W. Ladd, another dealer, thought that the paper wrapping took away the flavor of the peaches.

The domestic dealers generally are rather alarmed at the glut of grapes this year. It seems that the New Jersey, Hudson River and New York State crops are all coming to market at the same time, and it is difficult to know what to do with them.

President Bayles, of the Health Board, received a letter the other day from the chairman of the New Jersey Horticultural Society, warning him that certain of the Jersey grapes were dangerous to public health. The latter said that these grapes had been made "dropsical" by having their stalks punctured before the fruit was half ripe. The growers have sent the fruit to market labelled "choice and early grapes," and the society has asked Mr. Bayles to warn people against buying them.

None of the dealers seen by a reporter of the Herald had come across any bad fruit, and they were inclined to look upon the letter as a "scare."

MEDITERRANEAN FRUIT.

Another great branch of the fruit is the Mediterranean business. This goes almost exclusively through the hands of the auctioneer. The season for the Almeria, or, as they are commonly called, Malaga grapes, will soon begin, but many dealers have been obliged to send word to keep back these grapes, in order that they may not fall upon an already overstocked market.

Last year over 160,000 barrels were received and this year the crop has been so fine that there is every prospect for the arrival of a still larger number. The months of October, November and December are the great ones for this trade.

A curious fact of the trade this year has been the unparalleled flow of lemons from the Mediterranean. Dealers have written and rewritten to stop them, but until recently they kept arriving in vast numbers. Last month alone no less than 230,000 boxes of lemons arrived from the island of Sicily, and when it is remembered that there are in all cases 360 lemons to a box the demoralization of the market is not hard to acconnt for.

SOME USE FOR LEMONS.

The lemonade season has pretty well fallen through by this time. But what are not lemons used for?

As a gentleman said the other day: "Go into any uptown restaurant and order dinner. The first thing to be brought is a plate of oysters or clams. There is a good half lemon to squeeze upon them. Then comes soup, and there is almost always a slice of lemon floating in it. Next fish, and the chef has generally decorated the dish with pieces of lemon. Entrées, meats, etc., follow, and nearly all have lemon with them somehow.—[New York Herald.

The Honesty of Women.

Women are being employed more and more as book-keepers and cashiers, and one avowed ground of this employment is that they are more honest than men. Unquestionably they are so up to this time, and it is probable that they will have some permanent advantage in that way. Their moral instincts are somewhat higher and their temptations less on the side of perilous indulgences. But it has been pointed out more than once by the more cautious friends of women that a good deal of the present moral advantages of that sex in matters of honesty comes simply from inexperience. They have hitherto had so little to do with the direct handling of money that they regard it with more reverence than men; the bare thought of an irregularity alarms them; the conscience is wholly fresh and sensitive; they cannot conceive how a person can wrong another out of a dime and live. Moreover, they overrate the difficulties and perils consequent upon wrong-doing. A young book-keeper told me once that whenever her accounts failed to balance, if it were only for a single cent, she felt as if a policeman were just coming in at the door. It is as we find to be the case with lending money—any prudent person would rather lend it to a woman than to a man, because he knows that the chance of repayment is greater. In the present state of society, a debt of $5 seems a tremendous affair to a woman and a very small affair to a man; but let that woman borrow and repay a few times, and the fine edge of sensibility begins to wear off precisely as it does with a man, but more slowly.—[Harper's Bazar.

A New Use for Frogs in France.

Frog-spearing is a questionable kind of amusement which, it appears, is at present indulged in by French aristocratic idlers who are trying to kill the long summer days in country seats. The latest instance of this peculiar kind of sport took place in the grounds of the Chateau of Ballancourt. After luncheon a party of "ladies and gentlemen" armed with weapons resembling crossbows, the arrows being of hazelwood with iron lance heads, and attached to the bow by silken strings, so as to enable the frogs to be hauled in, proceeded to the banks of a pond. Then there was a great deal of unceremonious stooping down as the frogs appeared, and arrows were let off in all directions, the slaughter being considerable on the part of those who pursued the sport for the purpose of bagging game. The impaled batrachians were in all cases carefully collected and handed over to the cooks. —[London Daily Telegraph.

The Revenue Dispute.

There is not a human being who cannot live without whisky and tobacco. They are unnecessaries—luxuries. On the contrary, men, women and children must be fed, clothed, housed and warmed. These are necessities to living. The so-called protectionists want free whisky and cheap tobacco in order that they may keep up the prices of clothing, food, coal and lumber. The revenue reformers wish to retain tax on whisky and tobacco, knowing that only those who use them pay the taxes upon them, and at the same time reduce the tax on necessaries, the most important of which are the taxes on the raw materials—wool, hemp, jute, iron-ore, coal, salt, lumber and dye stuffs. The tax dispute in a nut-shell is: Is it best to have free whisky or free wool?—[Philadelphia Record.

POMONA PARADES.

A Great Day in Pomona—Driving the First Spike for Five Railways.

Regular Correspondence.]

EDITORS HERALD—Pomona had a local celebration this morning that made all citizens feel happy and more than contented over the future prospects of the town and valley. The occasion was the driving of the first spike in the first of five street railway lines that are sure to be completed by January 1st.

At 9 o'clock this morning the Pomona band paraded Second street to Garry, the present starting point of the Second-street Railway Company, composed of Messrs. Johnson, Lathrop, Crabb, Harvey, Smith and Adams, where a large crowd had assembled. Judge Tonner, who is the "Father of Pomona," made a few remarks concerning the history of the valley up to the present time, referring briefly to the original Los Angeles Land and Improvement Company, which attempted to build and make Pomona a city, but was "swamped" during the stormy times of 1876, when the banking system of the State was crushed. He complimented most deservedly the members of the company, mentioning the fact that Messrs. C. E. White and J. E. McComas, who have assisted so largely in making the present Pomona were members thereof. Judge Tonner severely rebuked the ridiculous editorial in Pomom's "Daily Effort," of the previous evening, which, with an unpardonable effrontery and without previously ascertaining facts, gave a most gracious and labored insult to the remaining four street railway companies, all of them composed of men of sterling worth and wealth. The reference to this uncalled-for article was received by the crowd with a spirit plainly in accord with the speaker.

Judge Tonner closed his remarks by reciting the following verses of his most beautiful and prophetic poem, written in 1875, after which Cyrus Burdick, the second settler in the valley, was honored by driving a golden spike. EMBRO.

PROPHETIC.

But fairer yet shall bloom our fields,
And grander orchards grow,
And sweeter music than the birds,
These pleasant vales shall know;
For science here shall rear her seats,
And versed in arts of piece,
Our Public Schools shall emulate
The shrines of Ancient Greece.

For, treading all these valleys o'er,
The iron road shall wend;
And here the locomotive's shriek
A quickening voice shall send,
To thrill the pulses of our vales
With new and lasting health;
To rouse our dormant energies,
And wake our slumbering wealth.

And where the flocks of Bixby graze,
And Stearn's menathas meet,
A thousand homes baptized in light,
The rising sun shall greet.
Fair homes where brimstone deities
Shall never be adored—
Where man's debasing rites are scoffed,
And Reason reigns as Lord.

But San Jose, sweet San Jose,
Thou mountain valley fair,
Begirt by half a hundred hills,
Enthroned mid beauty rare,
Shall see thy towering domes arise
Where Phillips herds his sheep;
And orange orchards yet shall stand
Where Vejar's mustangs sweep.

The flocks of Palomares
Must seek some distant field;
His hog-trod, rich cienegas
The golden wheat shall yield.
And all those glorious uplands
Where rabbits burrow now
Shall thrill beneath the Saxon's tread,
Behind a Yankee plow.

I see a thousand vineyards,
All o'er thy lovely plain;
I see the fair-haired Saxon
Where dwelt the sons of Spain.
I hear the laboring engine,
Where once carretas crawled;
I hear the songs of children
Where Spanish oxen bawled.

I see the lovely cottage
Where rancheria stood,
I hear our country's music
From out the distant wood,
And where base superstition
Was once the people's guide,
I see arise the Public School,
The freeman's hope and pride.

The Indian for a thousand years
These lovely vales possessed;
The Spaniard for a century
The native race oppressed.
And now, the blue-eyed Saxon,
From o,er the distant main,
With steady step is driving back
The dark-eyed race of Spain.

December 26th, 1869.

The A. & P. Extension.

Concerning the new line of the A. & P. railway from Rogers or Yucca Station through Antelope valley and the Tejon Pass, is thus stated in the Kern county Echo and other San Joaquin Valley papers:

Alonzo Coons, agent for Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express, threw the citizens of Bakersfield into something akin to a state of excitement on Tuesday by reporting that he, as such agent, had received the papers by which the right of way for the new railroad was given across the Tejon rancho, the same to be by him placed on record. The matter became at once the talk of the town, as it was said to establish the fact that the road would come to this place and not, as many feared, run a few miles away. In order to arrive at the exact facts in the case an Echo reporter went to the Recorder's office and was there permitted to see the document. Although it gives much gratifying information it fails to state what company is to build the road and thus renders the mystery that has all along clouded the movements of these parties, if possible darker than ever. The document is drawn by an attorney in New York city and begins as follows: "This agreement made this 13th day of July, in the year 1887, between M. E. Beale, of the city of Washington, District of Columbia, the party of the first part and I. R. Wilbur and A. C. Paulsell, both of San Francisco, and associates in trust for the company or individuals that are to construct and operate a railroad to be built from the vicinity of Mojave to Bakersfield, witnesseth, etc." This designation of parties is maintained throughout the entire contract. Then follows the covenants and conditions. The party of the first part agrees to give a right of way 50 feet on each side of the road, across all her possessions in this county. In consideration of which the parties of the second part bind themselves and their assignees, to construct and equip a railroad "from the vicinity of Mojave to Bakersfield" within three years; to fence with barbed wire said road across the Tejon rancho; to place a depot within three miles of the principal residence on the Tejon rancho; to make such substantial advancement on the first tunnel within one year from date as to give assurance that the said road will be completed in three years; to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors on said ranch during the construction of said road, and some other details with reference to damages to stock, etc. The compact is signed and acknowledged in the State of New Jersey by "M. E. Beale by her attorney, E. F. Beale," and by I. R. Wilbur for himself and as attorney for Mr. Paulsell.

There seems to be but one opinion around town as to who is doing this work. Every one believes that Messrs. Paulsell and Wilbur are operating for the recently incorporated San Francisco and San Joaquin Valley Railroad Company and that it, in turn, is but an alias for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe. Which side of the Southern Pacific will be chosen from here is, of course, an open question. Both the east and west side present many advantages and both routes are quite within the range of possibilities in the near future. Information reached this office some months ago that a gentleman, residing here, who may be considered "on the inside," was inquiring after property in the vicinity of Portersville which, it was hinted, might be taken as an indication that the road would go up that way. This view is strengthened by the following which we find in recent exchanges:

The Stockton Mail of Tuesday evening says: "Messrs. Paulsell, Wilbur and others, who recently secured the right of way for a railroad from Antioch to this city and thence to Oakdale and beyond, have ordered fifty road-scrapers to be manufactured at the works of G. Lessenden, on Lafayette street between California and Sutter streets in this city. The scrapers are known as the Porteous improved, patented in 1883, and do excellent work. The fifty will be finished and ready for delivery in about three weeks, when it is expected that work will be begun at once on the road."

And the Tulare Times remaks: "A party of surveyors, supposed to be in the employ of the lately incorporated San Francisco and San Joaquin Railroad Company, who intend building a road from Antioch to a place named Rogers, between Mojave and Yucca, are now running a line from Oakdale up the east side of the valley. From the course followed so far it is thought they will follow the line surveyed years ago for the Stockton and Visalia Railroad."

THOUGHTS FOR YOUNG WRITE

What Avails Style When You Have Nothing to Say?

You have, so far as your letters enable me to judge, among your other studies, not neglected the art of English composition. But, as an old friend of mine used to say in a signal instance, by the way, he was of a man whom fate or free will has compelled to give up to journalism what was meant for literature). "It is no use printing in capitals if you have no ink." What avails it to build up a pretty house of words if you have no thought to put inside of it? Moreover these pretty houses are as common as "Queen Anne" villas and "Chippendale" furniture. A style (mark the use of the indefinite article) is so common now, that for all the outcry it raised, it is impossible to deny the truth of that much-abused American saying, that no one now cared what you said, but how you said it. A style (indefinite article as before) is the easiest thing in the world to get, and there are as many ways of getting it as of "getting" religion. It is as easy to deface the English language as to deface an old church. Human intelligence is bounded, but to human folly there is no limit. Do not, then, imagine that you will succeed by the particular elegance of your writing alone. There will be rivals all around you to out-Herod you at the game; or your choicest epithets and most nicely-balanced periods may be tossed into the waste-paper basket to make room for

"Some stupendous
And tremendous (heaven defend us!)
Monst'r—inform'—ingens—horrend—ous
Demonisco—Seraphic
Penman's latest piece of graphic."

Literature, you must always remember, is in the eyes of nearly all editors, and must be, before all things, a commercial speculation. They are not the patrons, but the clients of the public taste, and the dictates of that taste, though they may sigh as critics, they must as editors obey.—[Macmillan's Magazine.

She.

The more we study She the more we don't understand how it is that She is able to twist us around her little finger whenever She feels like it. But She is.

For whom is it that in childhood's happy days we fight with a boy three sizes larger than ourselves, and get so severely punished that we can't sit up for a week? Why, for She—and She only laughs at us for our pains.

Who is it that devours all our spare change in the shape of caramels, and calls for more—and gets them, too? She.

For whom do we linger at stage doors with $10 bouquets, to purchase which we have to endure a fortnight's martyrdom at free-lunch counters? She.

Who is it that at the railroad restaurant deals out the soul-destroying sandwich and the death-dealing doughnut? 'Tis She every time. If it were He we would slay him on the spot, and glory in the deed.

Who accepts our hard-earned gold on the pretense of being a first-class cook, and then broils our steak in a frying-pan and boils our coffee an hour? She.

Who is it that accepts our theatre-tickets, our first-class suppers, our bouquets and our devotion, and then goes off and marries another fellow? She—and for this we ought to forgive her a good deal.

Who, we ask, is it that when we employ her as typewriter spells summer with one m, and February with only one r, and yet escapes without censure. It is She. Ah, yes! It is She.—[Tid Bits.

The Savior's Sepulchre.

The sepulchre itself is in the center of the church, an oblong tomb, into which you pass through a very low entrance, and you find that within it is divided into two chapels, the innermost being the spot where His body is supposed to have been laid. There I was one day when a Syrian woman came in and startled me into a knowledge of her presence by her bitter weeping. She had not noticed me in the dim light, and plainly thought herself alone. I could not pass her without disturbing her, and as I saw her standing before the altar, her white head-veil thrown back, in the simple Eastern dress which seems to have been handed down unchangingly, and beating her breast passionately, then throwing herself on the ground sobbing her lament, and offering an agonized prayer, I could not but think of the Mother of our Lord, of Mary Magdalene, and the daughters of Jerusalem. This was one of the many incidents which were perpetually recurring which made time disappear, made the past present, and by which the dead still seemed to be living on this earth.—[The Queen for September.

Emil Frese's HAMBURG TEA.

CANNOT BE TOO HIGHLY RECOMMENDED, AS IT IS TRULY A MARVEL OF THE AGE, and no household should be without it. It prevents as well as cures SKIN DISEASES, GOUT, RHEUMATISM, GRAVEL and all KIDNEY DISEASES, AFFECTED LIVER, HEADACHE, NAUSEA, BILE, WIND, INDIGESTION, CONSTIPATION, DIARRHŒA and DYSENTERY, FEVERS and AGUE, SLEEPLESSNESS, LASSITUDE, FOUL BREATH, and every disease brought on or aggravated by a disordered stomach. It is a specific against Contagion, and an efficacious remedy for sudden and severe COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, the PILES, JAUNDICE, etc.

It Purifies the Blood, Cleanses the Stomach and Bowels, and gives the whole system a Healthy and Delightful Tone. There never was a Medicine for the Nursery equal to it, and being composed of herbs only, it can be given safely to infants. It is a triumph in medicine harmless, yet efficacious. Invaluable in the family, on the road, at the mine, at sea, and everywhere.

The G. A. R. Illustrated Herald.

This office is now well supplied with the splendid G. A. R. edition of the Illustrated Herald. It is superbly adorned pictorially, and printed in the very best style known to the art. The reading matter is all about Southern California, her climate, resources and other attractions. This is the best publication extant to send to friends in the East who desire to know about this section. It is sold at the low price of 15 cents per copy.

A Printer's Error.

Sweet are the uses of adversity, the printer's copy said, but he set it up, sweet are the uses of advertising. Sweet, indeed, to those who in sickness and suffering have seen the advertisement of some sovereign remedy, which upon trial has brought them from death's door. "The best thing I ever saw in my paper was the advertisement of Dr. Pierce's 'Golden Medical Discovery'" is again and again the testimony of those who have been healed by it of lung disease, bronchial affections, tumors, ulcers, liver complaints and the ills to which flesh is heir.

* * * Nervous debility in either sex, however induced, speedily, thoroughly and permanently cured. Address, with 10 cents in stamps for reply and book of particulars, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Nip't in the Bud!"

Sad to say, many a good thing attains to nothing more than a fair beginning. On the other hand it is a matter for congratulation that the growth of some evil things may be also promptly frustrated. A large proportion of the cases of the most widespread and fatal diseases—consumption—have their inception in nasal catarrh. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is pleasant, soothing and effectual. Try it. It has cured thousands. All druggists.

Heart Disease!

Read the hospital reports, read the mortuary reports, read the medical publications, read the daily newspapers, and learn how widespread is heart disease, how difficult of detection it is by most people, how many and how sudden are the deaths it causes. Then read Dr. Flint's Treatise on Heart Disease, and learn what it is, what causes it, what diseases it gives rise to, what its symptoms are, and how it may be attacked. If you find that you have heart disease ask your druggist for a bottle of DR. FLINT'S HEART REMEDY. The treatise may be had on application.

The Latest and Greatest Discovery.

DR. J. DE PRATI'S HAMBURG FIGS.—A crystallized fruit cathartic. A discovery of the greatest interest to the medical profession. A boon to every household. A most delicious laxative or purgative prepared from fruits and vegetables. So perfectly harmless that they may be administered with entire safety to an infant. So efficacious to adults that a single dose will prove their value, and so elegant a preparation that it needs only to be presented to the public to become a necessity in every household throughout the land. For liver complaint, habitual constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia and piles, they are a specific. To travelers by sea and land they will be found invaluable; they are positively unfailing in their action, and this is the only medicine ever offered to the public that is acceptable to the taste, and so pleasant that children will eat the figs as eagerly as candy. For sale by every druggist throughout the world. Price, 25 cents a box. J. J. Mack & Co., Proprietors, 9 and 11 Front street, San Francisco, Cal.

I visited St. Helena for change of climate, but found it too hot. Then I went to Hayward's and it was too dull. At Berkeley the students annoyed me with their hoodlumism. It was too foggy in San Francisco and too bleak at Santa Cruz. Wherever I went I was uncomfortable, uneasy and unsettled. A friend suggested that this state of unrest might possibly be occasioned by billiousness or a disordered stomach, and advised a trial of Prese's Hamburg Tea, giving me a package as a present. Since then I use it occasionally and was never better in my life. I advise all to try it.

A Useful Precaution.

It is a useful precaution for the tourist, the commercial traveler, or the emigrant to the West, to take along Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Invalids who travel by steamboat or rail should provide themselves with it, in order to prevent or remedy the nausea which the jarring and vibration of vehicles in transitu often causes them. Vastly preferable is it for this simple, but needful purpose, to the heady, unmedicated stimulants of commerce. On board ship, it not only remedies sea sickness, but neutralizes the pernicious effects of water slightly brackish, which, if qualified is apt to give rise to irregularties of the bowels, cramps in the abdominal region, and dyspepsia. To aerial poison of malaria it is an efficient antidote. Sick headache, heartburn and wind upon the stomach are promptly banished by it. It healthfully stimulates the kidneys and bladder, and nullifies the early symptoms of rheumatism.

A PROPHET'S WILL.

Text of the Mormon Hierarch's Testament.

The full text of the will of John Taylor, late president of the Mormon church, is as follows:

In the name of my Creator, amen. I, John Taylor, of Salt Lake City, in the county of Salt Lake and Territory of Utah, being of the age of 78 years, and being of sound mind and memory, do make and declare this to be my last will and testament.

Second—I appoint to be the executors and trustees under this said will, without bonds, George John Taylor, John W, Taylor and L. John Nuttall.

Third—The names of my wives are:

Fourth—Leonora Cannon Taylor, deceased, daughter of Captain George and Leonora Callister Cannon, deceased.

Fifth—Elizabeth Kaighan Taylor, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Garrett Kaighan, deceased.

Sixth—Jane Ballantyne Taylor, daughter of David and Annie Bannerman Ballantyne, deceased.

Seventh—Mary Ann Oakley Taylor, daughter of Ezra and Elizabeth Degroot Oakley, deceased.

Eighth—Sophia Whittaker Taylor, deceased, daughter of Thomas and Sophia Turner Whittaker, deceased.

Ninth—Harriet Whittaker Taylor, deceased, daughter of Thomas and Sophia Turner Whittaker, deceased.

Tenth—Maggie Young Taylor, daughter of Ebenezer Russell Young and his wife Margaret Holden Young (deceased).

Eleventh—Carolina Gillam (deceased), daughter of —— and ——.

Twelfth—The children of my wife Leonora Taylor (deceased) are my heirs, namely:

George John Taylor, aged fifty-three years.

Mary Anne Taylor Redfield, aged fifty-three years.

Joseph James Taylor, aged forty-nine years.

Thirteenth—The children of my wife Elizabeth Kaighan Taylor are my heirs, namely:

Josephine Taylor, aged forty-one years.

Thomas Edward Taylor, aged thirty-eight years.

Arthur Bruce Taylor, aged thirty-four years.

Fourteenth—The children of my wife, Jane Ballantyne Taylor, are my heirs, namely:

Richard J. Taylor, aged thirty-nine years.

Anne Taylor Hyde, aged thirty-eight years.

David John Taylor (deceased).

Fifteenth—The children of my wife, Mary Anne Oakley Taylor are my heirs, namely:

Henry Ezra Taylor, aged thirty-eight years.

Eighteenth—The children of my wife Maggie Young Taylor are my heirs, namely:

Frank Y. Taylor, aged 26 years.

Ebenezer Y. Taylor, aged 27 years.

Leonora Taylor Harrington, aged 23 years.

Maggie Taylor, aged 17 years.

Nephi Y. Taylor, aged 15 years.

Mary Taylor, aged 13 years.

Abraham Taylor, aged 9 years.

Samuel Taylor, aged 6 years.

Nineteenth—I authorize my executors to settle all my trusts wherein I am trustee, and to pay any debts I may owe in respect to the same, and to receive whatever claim may be due my estate therefrom, and to make conveyance to the assignment to the proper party or parties of the trust estate, and to take proper indemnity and security as to all outstanding liabilities I may be under for such trust estate, so that my private estate shall suffer no loss by reason of my liabilities for such debt; and power is hereby conferred upon the executors named in this will to designate and determine the trust property held by me for any use or purpose; and any such determination by such executors shall be final and conclusive.

Twentieth—In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this thirtieth day of June, A. D., eighteen hundred and eighty-seven.

[SEAL.] JOHN TAYLOR.

Signed, sealed, published and declared by John Taylor to be his last will and testament, in our presence; and we have at his request, in his presence, and in the presence of each other subscribed our names as witnesses thereto. SAMUEL BATEMAN, JAMES E. MALIN.

PLAIN TALK TO JEFF DAVIS.

Advised by a Confederate Journal to Become a Citizen.

The Charleston, S. C., News and Courier has given some plain advice to Jefferson Davis, which shows that Editor Dawson has come to the full belief that the war is over. It says that the aged dweller at Beauvoir is simply a Confederate sign-post, and that it is his own fault that he is "a man without a country." It reminds Mr. Davis that he owes more to the South than the South can ever owe to him, and that if he goes to Atlanta to meet President Cleveland, he will be untrue to the people who were always true to him, for he will put himself in a position to injure them by furnishing material for political war to the enemies of the Southern states. The paper then continues:

It is incontestable that Mr. Davis can go where he pleases and say what he likes. The abstract right is not in the question. But Mr. Davis is a relic of the past and belongs to the past, and the safest place for him is on his plantation at Beauvoir. There is nothing in his career to make him especially noteworthy excepting his election as President of the Confederate States and his subsequent experiences. It is therefore as ex-President of the Confederacy that he is wined and dined and invited to make speeches. When he speaks he is more likely than not to say what is irritating, and therefore and though he were to utter the loftiest sentiments, he would be regarded as insincere, for the simple fact that his words and his acts are not in accord. The man who declines to be an American citizen and who takes pride in avoiding the responsibilities of citizenship should at least hold his tongue and curb his pen instead of forcing his counsel and his grievances upon the consideration of those whose duties and obligations he is unwilling to share.

Mr. Davis turns his back upon the Union as it is, and is at war with settled and unchangeable facts. If he is right, then J. E. Johnston, the Lees, Gordon, Beauregard, Colquitt, Nicholls, Butler, Hampton, McGowan, the Vances, Payne, Cockrell, and all the long line of Confederate soldiers and statesmen—saving himself—are utterly and meanly wrong. The News and Courier has gone farther than any other newspaper in the United States in asserting the rightfulness of Secession and the absolute justice of the Southern cause. It has never allowed a denial of this to pass unchallenged. It has been so faithful to the Confederacy that it is, even to this day, denounced as a "rebel newspaper." Year after year it has told the story of the glory of the boys who wore the gray, but it is not a blind worshiper of Mr. Davis. In its eyes the ex-Confederates, in their sufferings, in their struggles, in their proud success, are more a thousandfold than Mr. Davis was or is and whenever the idiosyncracies of Mr. Davis, or his weaknesses, conflict with the barefooted boys of twenty years ago it will say so unhesitatingly and without caring a jot for the sneers or abuse of persons who were safe in their cradles or in official bomb-proofs when the fight for the Confederacy was made and lost. The cause of the ex-Confederates to-day is the cause of the United States. The United States is their country. They have no other and want no other.

One Dollar for the "Know How."

"Will you please saw this ring off my finger?"

It was an old woman who made this remark to a Broadway jeweler, and as the worker in gold and silver took the wrinkled though fat and shapely hand in his, it trembled violently and a tear dropped upon the counter.

"Excuse me," continued the old lady, "but it is my wedding ring. I have never had it off since I was married—forty-five years ago. I have refrained from having it cut, hoping that my finger might get thinner and that I could take it off without breaking it."

"And what if I can remove it without cutting?" inquired the jeweler.

"But can you?" said she, looking up in a half credulous way. "If you can, do it by all means."

Then the jeweler took the swollen finger and wound it round from the top downward in a length of flat rubber braid. The elastic cord exerted its force upon the tissues of the finger gently and gradually, until the flesh seemed to be pushed down to the bone. The old woman's hand was then held above her head for a brief interval. Then the bandage was quickly uncorded and rewound about the member. This was repeated three times, and finally it was found upon uncovering the finger that it was small enough to admit of the ring's being removed with ease.

"I have never failed but once," said the jeweler, "and I have removed many rings from fingers even more swollen than yours. Do I charge for it? Oh, yes. I ask the same amount I would get if the ring was left to be mended after being cut—$1. Thank you!" and as he turned to his bench and the old woman left the store he added: "But, after all, she might have done the same thing herself. It's not the work, however, I charge for; it's the 'know how.'"—[Man and Express.

He Knows This Trick Now.

"Have any of you found a bank-note?" inquired a man in wild excitement as he hurriedly approached a knot of loungers at the Union depot yesterday morning.

"Have you lost one?" asked an elderly stranger of bland and sedate appearance.

"Yes, yes; have you found it?"

"Wait a moment. What was its denomination?"

"It was a $50 bill—National bank note."

The stranger leisurely drew a roll of bills from his pocket, looked them over, took one out and passed it over to the excited individual, remarking with much urbanity as he did so:

"It is well for you, my friend that it was found by an honest man. I picked it up a few minutes ago and I take pleasure in giving it back to you what I am satisfied is your property."

Thank you, sir; thank you. It's my turn now to do the fair thing. Here's a ten-dollar bill. You shan't return it. Take it, sir; take it, or I shall feel hurt."

The stranger, thus urged, took the money, and the grateful individual walked off with the $50. He was considerably surprised to learn a few hours later that the bill was not the one he had lost at all, but a counterfeit. He is now looking for the bland and elderly stranger, but there are reasons for doubting his success in finding him.—[Chicago Tribune.

Women Drink Saratoga Water.

It is an interesting sight to sit for fifteen minutes in front of the counter where the water is handed out to visitors. Especially is the sight interesting during the forenoon, when the regular visitors have crawled out of sight in their rooms at the hotels and thirty or fifty carloads of excursionists pour into the park. Bilious-looking old men drink with more of an effort than all other comers. They invariably gulp down a half glassful of water, lean heavily on their canes or place their disengaged hands over their stomachs, as the case may be, roll their eyes spasmodically and act just as if they feared the water would result in an explosion on assimilating with unknown fluids in the gastronomical regions. Anon an old lady will force down a swallow or two; then she will close her eyes, make wry faces, and shake her head after the manner that a terrier shakes a rat. An aged gentleman was observed to declare that the "Saratoga mineral waters didn't taste as good as the water in the old well on the farm." Still another grew indignant and announced that he would not be imposed upon. "Needn't think 'cause I look seedy," he shouted with righteous wrath, "that I am a fool. I want some of the genuewine Congress spring water. Recken I ken tell mineral water from slop when I taste it."—[Saratoga Correspondence.

An Embarrassment of Virtues.

A little girl, wishing to make her father a present, was very much at fault to know what to buy for the purpose. After puzzling her brain considerably, and getting what suggestions she could from the other members of the family, she finally went to her mother, in despair, and said: "Only think, mamma, I don't know what to get papa for a Christmas present. He don't smoke, nor drink, nor nothing."—[Eastern Argus.

DAILY HERALD.

TWO MAIDS IN DISGRACE.

A Great Scare Over a Supposed Kidnaping.

The classic town of Guildford, England, has had a great sensation this week. Last Sunday morning the granddaughters of Gen. Westis, of Highfield House, disappeared. They were aged respectively eleven and nine. When last seen they were playing upon the lawn near the house before breakfast. The grounds were first searched and then, upon their not being found, the General became very much alarmed, and was convinced that the children had been stolen by gypsies. Notice was at once sent to the police, and the news was telegraphed to various stations along the line. The local clergy suspended service in their churches, so that the parishioners might turn out to hunt for the lost babes. Country gentlemen from miles around mounted their fleet horses and sent their men up and down through every by-way to intercept the villains who had carried off the children. The venerable rector of St. Nicholas, a very aged man, also started out and spent the day in searching.

The children were found toward evening in a patch of woods some three miles from town. Their appearance justified the worst fears of their anxious relatives. The little children told a woful tale. A tramp had come suddenly over the wall and had hurried them off, threatening to kill them if they made a noise. He had taken off their rich clothes, and had put in their place rags. Their stockings were cut into slits, their faces and hands were stained dark brown with walnut juice, and their legs were also richly colored.

According to the infants, they had been gagged during part of the day, and the mouth of one of the children was bleeding from the cruel treatment. The relatives of these lost darlings were overcome with the terrible story. The children then described the man who had carried them off. He was a beetle-browned, swarthy-complexioned, black-bearded giant.

This description was furnished to the police and a handsome reward offered for his discovery. The town has been convulsed with excitement during the whole week. Anxious mothers have hardly ventured to let their children out of their sight. The English papers have given much attention to this remarkable attempt to steal two children of one of the most prominent men.

The sequel, however, is not so dramatic. The fact that the police could find no evidence of the tramp led some of the more shrewd to suspect the truth of the story, and the venerable rector who had spent three hours last Sunday searching for these little lambs has finally succeeded in extricating a confession from the younger that the story was made up, and that they had torn their own clothes and stained their own faces for the purpose of creating a sensation. These enterprising children have been packed off to school, leaving Guildford in a state of disgust at this result of so much uproar.—[Times-Democrat.

Arctic Cold.

A person who has never been in the polar regions can probably have no idea of what cold really is; but by reading the terrible experience of Arctic travelers in that icy region some notion can be formed of the extreme cold that prevails there. When we have the temperature down to zero out of doors we think it bitterly cold, and if our houses were not so warm as, at least, 60 degrees above zero, we should begin to talk of freezing to death. Think, then, of living where the thermometer goes down to 30 degrees below zero in the house in spite of the stove. Of course in such a case the fur garments are piled on until a man looks like a great bundle of skins. Dr. Moss, of the English polar expedition of 1875 and 1876, among other odd things tells of the effect of the cold on a wax candle which he burned there. The temperature was 35 degrees below zero, and the doctor must have been considerably discouraged when, upon looking at his candle, he discovered that the flame had all it could do to keep warm. It was so cold that the flame could not melt all the wax of the candle, but was forced to eat its way down the candle, leaving a sort of skeleton of the candle standing. There was heat enough, however, to melt oddly-shaped holes in the thin walls of wax, the result was a beautiful lace-like cylinder of white, with a tongue of yellow flame burning inside it and sending out into the darkness many streaks of light. This is not only a curious effect of extreme cold, but it shows how difficult it must be to find anything like warmth in a place where even fire itself almost gets cold. The wonder is that any man can have the courage to willingly return to such a bitter region after having once got safely away from it, and yet the truth is that the spirit of adventure is so strong in some men that it is the very hardship and danger which attract them.—[Scientific American.

Gondoliers Disappearing.

The penny steamer is relentlessly improving the most graceful craft in existence off the face of the Venician lagoons. They can scarcely last much longer. Nature had for a long time kept the taint of the railway out of Venice; but once steam made its way into the canals, the conclusion was a foregone one. The case of the gondoliers is peculiarly hard; even utilitarianism should pity them. A few years ago they numbered as many as 2000 out of a population of 129,000. That was before the French company started the steam launches. Since then, year by year their number has been reduced.—[Pall Mall Gazette.

A Long-Named Baby.

A very little baby was born to Dennis and Betsy Broughton, respectable colored citizens of Monroe, Ga., the other day. It weighed but two pounds, and looked too small to have life in it. But its proud mother said that there was nothing the matter with it, it was "jes' small, dat's all," and she named it Martha Ann Mary Magdalene Frances Cleveland Broughton.—[Atlanta Constitution.

INVALIDS' HOTEL AND SURGICAL INSTITUTE

No. 663 Main Street, BUFFALO, N. Y.

Not a Hospital, but a pleasant Remedial Home, organized with

A FULL STAFF OF EIGHTEEN PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,

And exclusively devoted to the treatment of all Chronic Diseases.

This imposing Establishment was designed and erected to accommodate the large number of invalids who visit Buffalo from every State and Territory, as well as from many foreign lands, that they may avail themselves of the professional services of the Staff of skilled specialists in medicine and surgery that compose the faculty of this widely-celebrated institution.

A FAIR AND BUSINESS-LIKE OFFER TO INVALIDS.

We earnestly invite you to come, see and examine for yourself, our institutions, appliances, advantages and success in curing chronic diseases. Have a mind of your own. Do not listen to or heed the counsel of skeptical friends or jealous physicians, who know nothing of us, our system of treatment or means of cure, yet who never lose an opportunity to misrepresent and endeavor to prejudice people against us. We are responsible to you for what we represent, and if you come and visit us, and find that we have misrepresented in any particular, our institutions, advantages or success, we will promptly refund to you all expenses of your trip. We court honest, sincere investigation, have no secrets and are only too glad to show all interested and candid people what we are doing for suffering humanity.

NOT ALWAYS NECESSARY TO SEE PATIENTS.

By our original system of diagnosis, we can treat many chronic diseases just as successfully without as with a personal consultation. While we are always glad to see our patients, and become acquainted with them, show them our institutions, and familiarize them with our system of treatment, yet we have not seen one person in five hundred whom we have cured. The perfect accuracy with which scientists are enabled to deduce the most minute particulars in their several departments, appears almost miraculous, if we view it in the light of the early ages. Take, for example, the electro-magnetic telegraph, the greatest invention of the age. Is it not a marvelous degree of accuracy which enables an operator to exactly locate a fracture in a submarine cable nearly three thousand miles long? Our venerable clerk of the "weather" has become so thoroughly familiar with the most wayward elements of nature that he can accurately predict their movements. He can sit in Washington and foretell what the weather will be in Florida or New York as well as if several hundred miles did not intervene between him and the places named. And so in all departments of modern science, what is required is the knowledge of certain signs. From these scientists deduce accurate conclusions regardless of distance. So, also, in medical science, diseases have certain unmistakable signs, or symptoms, and by reason of this fact, we have been enabled to originate and perfect a system of determining, with the greatest accuracy, the nature of chronic diseases, without seeing and personally examining our patients. In recognizing diseases without a personal examination of the patient, we claim to possess no miraculous powers. We obtain our knowledge of the patient's disease by the practical application, to the practice of medicine, of well-established principles of modern science. And it is to the accuracy with which this system has endowed us that we owe our almost world-wide reputation of skillfully treating lingering or chronic affections. This system of practice, and the marvelous success which has been attained through it, demonstrate the fact that diseases display certain phenomena, which, being subjected to scientific analysis, furnish abundant and unmistakable data, to guide the judgment of the skillful practitioner aright in determining the nature of diseased conditions. The most ample resources for treating lingering or chronic diseases, and the greatest skill, are thus placed within the easy reach of every invalid, however distant he or she may reside from the physicians making the treatment of such affections a specialty. Full particulars of our original, scientific system of examining and treating patients at a distance are contained in "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," By R. V. Pierce, M. D. 1000 pages and over 300 colored and other illustrations. Sent, post-paid, for $1.50. Or write and describe your symptoms, inclosing ten cents in stamps, and a complete treatise, on your particular disease, will be sent you, with our terms for treatment and all particulars.

SIGNS OF DISEASE.

MARVELOUS SUCCESS.

COMMON SENSE AS APPLIED TO MEDICINE.

It is a well-known fact, and one that appeals to the judgment of every thinking person, that the physician who devotes his whole time to the study and investigation of a certain class of diseases, must become better qualified to treat such diseases than he who attempts to treat every ill to which flesh is heir, without giving special attention to any class of diseases. Men in all ages of the world, who have become famous, have devoted their lives to some special branch of science, art or literature.

By thorough organization, and subdividing the practice of medicine and surgery in this institution, every invalid is treated by a specialist—one who devotes his undivided attention to the particular class of diseases to which the case belongs. The advantage of this arrangement must be obvious. Medical science offers a vast field for investigation, and no physician can, within the brief limits of a life-time, achieve the highest degree of success in the treatment of every malady incident to humanity.

OUR FIELD OF SUCCESS.

NASAL, THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES. The treatment of Diseases of the Air Passages and Lungs, such as Chronic Nasal Catarrh, Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, both through correspondence and at our institutions, constitutes an important specialty.

We publish three separate books on Nasal, Throat and Lung Diseases, which give much valuable information, viz: (1) A Treatise on Consumption, Laryngitis and Bronchitis; price, post-paid, ten cents. (2) A Treatise on Asthma, or Phthisic, giving new and successful treatment; price, post-paid, ten cents. (3) A Treatise on Chronic Nasal Catarrh; price, post-paid, two cents.

DISEASES OF DIGESTION. Dyspepsia, "Liver Complaint," Obstinate Constipation, Chronic Diarrhœa, Tape-worms, and kindred affections are among those chronic diseases in the successful treatment of which our specialists have attained great success. Many of the diseases affecting the liver and other organs contributing in their functions to the process of digestion, are very obscure, and are frequently mistaken by both laymen and physicians for other maladies, and treatment is employed directed to the removal of a disease which does not exist. Our Complete Treatise on Diseases of the Digestive Organs will be sent to any address on receipt of ten cents in postage stamps.

KIDNEY DISEASES. BRIGHT'S DISEASE, DIABETES, and kindred maladies, have been very largely treated, and cures effected in thousands of cases which had been pronounced beyond hope. These diseases are readily diagnosticated, or determined, by chemical analysis of the urine, without a personal examination of patients, who can, therefore, generally be successfully treated at their homes. The study and practice of chemical analysis and microscopical examination of the urine in our consideration of cases, with reference to correct diagnosis, in which our institution long ago became famous, has naturally led to a very extensive practice in diseases of the urinary organs. Probably no other institution in the world has been so largely patronized by suffers from this class of maladies as the old and world-famed World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel. Our specialists have acquired, through a vast and varied experience, great expertness in determining the exact nature of each case, and, hence, have been successful in nicely adapting their remedies for the cure of each individual case.

CAUTION. These delicate diseases should be carefully treated by a specialist thoroughly familiar with them, and who is competent to ascertain the exact condition and stage of advancement which the disease has made (which can only be ascertained by a careful chemical and microscopical examination of the urine), for medicines which are curative in one stage or condition are known to do positive injury in others. We have, therefore, attempted to put up anything for general sale through druggists, recommending to cure these diseases, although possessing very superior remedies, knowing full well from an extensive experience that the only safe and successful course is to carefully determine the disease and its progress in each case by a chemical and microscopical examination of the urine, and then adapt our medicines to the exact stage of the disease and condition of our patient.

WONDERFUL SUCCESS. To this wise course of action we attribute the marvelous success attained by our specialists in that important and extensive Department of our institutions devoted exclusively to the treatment of diseases of the kidneys and bladder. The treatment of diseases of the urinary organs having constituted a leading branch of our practice at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, and, being in constant receipt of numerous inquiries for a complete work on the nature and curability of these maladies, written in a style to be easily understood, we have published a large Illustrated Treatise on these diseases, which will be sent to any address on receipt of ten cents in postage stamps.

BLADDER DISEASES. INFLAMMATION OF THE BLADDER, STONE IN THE BLADDER, Gravel, Enlarged Prostate Gland, Retention of Urine, and kindred affections, may be included among those in the cure of which our specialists have achieved extraordinary success. These are fully treated of in our illustrated pamphlet on Urinary Diseases. Sent by mail for ten cents in stamps.

STRICTURE. STRICTURES AND URINARY FISTULÆ.—Hundreds of cases of the worst form of strictures, many of them greatly aggravated by the careless use of instruments in the hands of inexperienced physicians and surgeons, causing false passages, urinary fistulæ, and other complications, annually consult us for relief and cure. That no case of this class is too difficult for the skill of our specialists is proved by cures reported in our illustrated treatise on these maladies, to which we refer with pride. To intrust this class of cases to physicians of small experience is a dangerous proceeding. Many a man has been ruined for life by so doing, while thousands annually lose their lives through unskilful treatment. Send particulars of your case and ten cents in stamps for a large, illustrated treatise containing many testimonials.

NERVOUS DISEASES. Epileptic Convulsions, or Fits, Paralysis, or Palsy, Locomotor Ataxia, St. Vitus's Dance, Insomnia, or inability to sleep, and threatened insanity, Nervous Debility, arising from overstudy, excesses, and other causes, and every variety of nervous affection, are treated by our specialists for these diseases with unusual success. See numerous cases reported in our different illustrated pamphlets on nervous diseases, any one of which will be sent for ten cents in postage stamps, when request for them is accompanied with a statement of a case for consultation, so that we may know which one of our Treatises to send.

DISEASES OF WOMEN. We have a special Department, thoroughly organized, and devoted exclusively to the treatment of Diseases of Women. Every case consulting our specialists, whether by letter or in person, is given the most careful and considerate attention. Important cases (and we get few which have not already baffled the skill of all the home physicians) has the benefit of a full Council, of skilled specialists. Rooms for ladies in the Invalids' Hotel are very private. Send ten cents in stamps for our large Complete Treatise on Diseases of Women, illustrated with numerous wood-cuts and colored plates (160 pages).

RADICAL CURE OF RUPTURE. HERNIA (Breach), or RUPTURE, no matter of how long standing, or of what size, is promptly and permanently cured by our specialists, without the knife and without dependence upon trusses. Abundant references. Send ten cents for Illustrated Treatise.

PILES, FISTULÆ, and other diseases affecting the lower bowels, are treated with wonderful success. The worst cases of pile tumors are permanently cured in fifteen to twenty days. Send ten cents for Illustrated Treatise.

DELICATE DISEASES. Organic weakness, nervous debility, premature decline of the manly powers, involuntary vital losses, impaired memory, mental anxiety, absence of will-power, melancholy, weak back, and kindred affections, are speedily, thoroughly and permanently cured.

To those acquainted with our institutions, it is hardly necessary to say that the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, with the branch establishment located at No. 3 New Oxford Street, London, England, have, for many years, enjoyed the distinction of being the most largely patronized and widely celebrated institutions in the world for the treatment and cure of those affections which arise from youthful indiscretions and pernicious, solitary practices.

We, many years ago, established a special Department for the treatment of these diseases, under the management of some of the most skillful physicians and surgeons on our Staff, in order that all who apply to us might receive all the advantages of a full Council of the most experienced specialists.

WE OFFER NO APOLOGY. We offer no apology for devoting so much attention to this neglected class of diseases, believing no condition of humanity is too wretched to merit the sympathy and best services of the noble profession to which we belong. Many who suffer from these terrible diseases contract them innocently. Why any medical man, intent on doing good and alleviating suffering, should shun such cases, we cannot imagine. Why any one should consider it otherwise than most honorable to cure the worst cases of these diseases, we cannot understand; and yet of all the other maladies which afflict mankind there is probably none about which physicians in general practice know so little. We shall, therefore, continue, as heretofore, to treat with our best consideration, sympathy, and skill, all applicants who are suffering from any of these delicate diseases.

CURED AT HOME. Most of these cases can be treated when at a distance just as well as if here in person.

A Complete Treatise (136 pages) on these diseases sent sealed, in plain envelope, secure from observation, on receipt of only ten cents, in stamps, for postage.

SURGICAL PRACTICE. Hundreds of the most difficult operations known to modern surgery are annually performed in the most skillful manner, by our Surgeon-specialists. Large Stones are safely removed from the Bladder, by crushing, washing and pumping them out, thus avoiding the great danger of cutting. Our specialists, remove cataract from the eye, thereby curing blindness. They also straighten cross-eyes and insert artificial ones when needed. Many Ovarian and also Fibroid Tumors of the Uterus are arrested in growth and cured by electrolysis, coupled with other means of our invention, whereby the great danger of cutting operations in these cases is avoided.

Especially has the success of our improved operations for Varicocele, Hydrocele, Fistulæ, Ruptured Cervix Uteri, and for Ruptured Perineum, been alike gratifying both to ourselves and our patients. Not less so have been the results of numerous operations for Stricture of the Cervical Canal, a condition in the female generally resulting in Barrenness, or Sterility, and the cure of which, by a safe and painless operation, removes this commonest of impediments to the bearing of offspring.

A Complete Treatise on any one of the above maladies will be sent on receipt of ten cents in stamps.

ALL CHRONIC DISEASES A SPECIALTY. Although we have in the preceding paragraphs, made mention of some of the special ailments to which particular attention is given by the specialists at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, yet the institution abounds in skill, facilities, and apparatus for the successful treatment of every form of chronic ailment, whether requiring for its cure medical or surgical means.

Port Ballona!

The Future Harbor of Southern California

THIS IS THE OCEAN TERMINUS OF THE CALIFORNIA CENTRAL RAILROAD, OF THE ATCHISON, Topeka and Santa Fe, system, who are under contract to lay five miles of side-track. The shortest railroad line between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Port Ballona is Situated on Santa Monica Bay,

Only thirty minutes' ride by rail from the city of Los Angeles, with trains to begin running every three hours in the day early in July. Property can be purchased now at a much lower figure than when railroad and steamships are brought together. Port Ballona has two main avenues, one 100 feet and one 80 feet wide, with all other streets 60 feet wide. Residence lots are 40x150, and business lots 25x100 and 26x150 feet. The residence property is at an elevation of from 50 to 75 feet above tide water, thus affording a most magnificent view, extending from Point Duma to the San Jacinto Mountains, and from the San Bernardino Mountains to Santa Catalina Island, in the blue Pacific, and with a BEACH unsurpassed on the coast.

The Beautiful Lake of Ballona

Is one of the greatest features of the place, affording at all times a perfectly safe and pleasant place for sailing and boating of all kinds, and teeming with fish and water fowl. There is also a never-failing spring of pure SULPHUR WATER, and both sulphur and salt water bath-houses are already in course of construction.

WATER WILL BE DELIVERED IN IRON PIPES IN FRONT OF EACH LOT UNDER GOOD PRESSURE.

Lots are now on sale, and maps and all other information can be obtained from

SONS OF MILLIONAIRES.

Personal Notes About Several Prominent Young Men.

Do the sons of our millionaires display anything of the ability which has made their fathers rich and in some cases famous? asks the New York World. How carefully Commodore Vanderbilt disciplined William H., and then left him the bulk of his fortune, that the Vanderbilt name and the Vanderbilt interests might be perpetuated. See how Jay Gould is training his sons so that his vast enterprises may be fostered and cared for when he is no longer able to attend to them.

Eddie Gould is short, rather inclined to stoutness and very dark, with straight and heavily-marked eyebrows. He dresses well but not loudly or fashionably. He is nearly twenty-two, and until this year attended pretty closely at the New Columbia School of Mines, and is a pretty fair civil engineer. Several months ago Mr. Gould took him into his office for the purpose of training him, as he has his elder son George. He has, it would seem pursued much the same policy with the younger as with the older son. Among the first things he did was to have him made a director in one of the big coal companies so that he should have a direct and vital interest in corporate properties. The young man has not been confined to the office though. In company with Mr. Taylor, of the dock department, he has inspected the new aqueduct construction very thoroughly and has examined numerous coal and mineral properties, with the idea, of course, of becoming practically familiar with such things. Young Gould takes a good deal of exercise. He is a member of one of the canoe clubs here, and used to be seen frequently at Brentano's, where he was a liberal buyer of works on canoes and canoeing. Notwithstanding he has the daring spirit displayed in speculation, the young man, both in manner and conversation, is timid and reserved.

On the piazza of the United States Hotel, at Saratoga, the other evening, a family group were seated along the railing, opposite the music stand, listening to Stub's orchestra, and easily holding the attention of two or three pretty girls who were chattering a short distance away. The enthusiastic interest of the young ladies was explained by the presence of two young millionaires in the group referred to. A casual glance settled that question. There sat Simon Wormser, the representative of reorganized Reading in Wall street, and with him were his two rotund and good-natured olive branches, known on the family records as Morris and Alexander. Morris has already had his modicum of notoriety, for his lifeline got mixed up a little in the financial complications following the crash of December 15th last in Wall street.

Young Wormser was born in California in 1864, and is therefore only 23 years of age. He graduated from Columbia in 1885, and that very summer went into the office of his father and uncle. He began speculating, and was successful until he met with the experience noted above. His attention to business did not prevent him, however, from pursuing his preparations for the bar, and he will probably be admitted this fall. It is also stated on good authority that before the snow flies he will have married an exceedingly pretty girl, who is now engaging the attention of a dozen unsuspecting youths, who do not know that the prize is already won.

The story of George Work's adventure with his horse at Long Branch has attained a pretty wide circulation. George Work is the son of millionaire Frank Work, is a member of the firm of Work, O'Keefe & Co., an enthusiastic horseman, as his father is, and is about twenty-five of age. A couple of weeks ago he jumped the magnificent horse he was riding through the window of the Howland Hotel bar-room and won a wager of $200, and then, spurred by success, spurred the horse through the window-frame, was thrown and met with some slight injuries. He is living at Elberon, where his sister, Mrs. Burke Roche, is keeping house for him. He is a handsome fellow, tall, round-faced, with chestnut curls, and is considered by designing social mammas an exceedingly good catch. In the winter he is one of the Delmonico crowd. He is rated as a shrewd business man and is expected to duplicate his father's business successes. One of his sisters married Cooper Hewitt not long ago.

Joseph Hart Lyons is another heir to prospective millions who is at Long Branch just now. He is a grandnephew of Henry Hart, who has the biggest share of Pacific Mail locked up in his strong boxes, and is the son of President Lyon, of the Third Avenue road. He is about 25 and has had a pretty wide and varied experience since he started in the world about five years ago. For some two years he was identified with Pacific Mail and spent a large portion of that time in China in the interest of the property. For several years he has given his attention to the practice of law. He is accounted clever among his friends, and with increasing years and experience important results are expected from him. He is tall, dark and good-looking, and is a favorite in society, as he seems to possess a never-ending flow of animal spirits. He is devoted to the theatres, a habitual first-nighter, and a year or more ago was very much interested with Mrs. James Brown Potter in a project for building a theatre to be devoted to the use of amateurs.

That full-faced young man with the black mustache and a straw hat, is Walter Sandford, one of the Sandford boys, of Amsterdam, N. Y., who spends his winters in New York, however, with his brother, and who belongs to the Delmonico crowd. He is young man who, assisted by Mr. Gebhard, gave a brief pugilistic exhibition on Fifth avenue, in front of Delmonico's, two or three years ago. Mr. Sandford used to be directly interested in the turf and owned a number of horses, the best known of which was that excellent steeple-chaser, Postguard. He seems to have relinquished these interests entirely. He bets occasionally, and is reported to have lost $10,000 on Dunbayne the other day.

Among the young millionaires who have married and settled down and taken up what they regard as their life-work, DeWitt Seligman has a career perhaps as interesting as any. He went into the office of J. and W. Seligman, the bankers, after leaving college, and shortly after his arrival on the street he came to the conclusion that the Missouri Pacific and St. Louis and San Francisco stocks were exceedingly cheap at the prices then prevailing. Missouri Pacific was ruling at $10, and St. Louis and San Francisco preferred about $6 per share He bought as heavily as his purse would permit. When he had made about three-quarters of a million of dollars, the young man's uncle, Joseph Seligman, discovered that he was speculating, and trouble ensued at once. The young man stepped down and out with his winnings, which were all the outcome of an investment of $10,000, and left the street. He devoted his time to study thereafter, secured the degree of LL. D., and became earnestly interested in educational matters. He is now a Commissioner of Education and editor of the Epoch.

FACTS ABOUT FULLERTON.

Fullerton is a town site on the San Diego division of the Santa Fé Railroad, twenty-three miles southwest of Los Angeles and three miles north of Anaheim. It is a regular station on that railway and all trains will stop there.

ADVANTAGES.

Fullerton has the most productive country tributary to it of any new town site laid out in Southern California; the country around is noted for its fertile soil and the great abundance of water. The water is derived from the Anaheim ditch, which, as is well known, is the most copious supply in Southern California. Oranges grow to the greatest perfection. The famous Gilman ranch adjoins the town site of Fullerton. The Gilman place is the "show" walnut grove in the State, visitors being taken there from all parts of the country and shown it as a sample of what can be done in the way of having a perfect walnut grove. Oranges and limes from this section are noted throughout the State as being the best produced anywhere, and commanding the top market price.

Land in the vicinity of Fullerton is still at a very reasonable figure, as the country is comparatively little known, being at present out of the way of the general line of travel. With the advent of the Santa Fé Railroad, which is expected within ninety days, property will advance very materially, as it will then first be introduced to many seeking productive land at lower prices than that asked for in and about Pasadena.

OSTRICHES.

The original and largest ostrich farm is only one mile from the town, and is a great source of interest to tourists. One hundred ostriches may be counted.

COMMONWEALTH AVENUE

runs through the center of the town, one hundred feet wide and ten miles long. This will be one of the finest avenues in the Southern country. Lined with umbrageous shade-trees, and the soil is naturally adapted to road-making, packing as hard as asphalt, and never dusty or muddy.

ASPHALTUM.

Immense deposits of oil and asphaltum occur in the neighborhood.

PRICES OF LAND.

Ordinary land without water can be purchased for from $75 to $200 per acre; best land with water at $350 to $700 per acre, and there is but little doubt that all this land will sell readily at $1000 per acre within six months from date.

IMPROVEMENTS IN THE TOWN OF FULLERTON.

A $25,000 hotel is now in course of erection and will be finished within ninety days; two other $10,000 brick buildings are now contracted for and will be finished within the same time. A bank with $100,000 capital is incorporated, and will put up a $15,000 pressed-brick building immediately. Quite a number of houses are now in course of construction and many lots have been sold conditionally upon brick buildings being erected thereon immediately.

A cement sidewalk six feet wide is now being laid upon all the principal streets; water piped in heavy iron pipes and under good pressure through the streets.

PRICES OF LOTS.

Lots range in price from $150 to $700; all streets are graded and there is not an undesirable lot in the entire town site, as the ground is perfectly level, with a slight fall from the foothills.

SOIL.

The soil is a fine sandy loam which neither gets muddy nor dusty.

CLIMATE.

Fullerton being but eight eight miles from the ocean, gets the sea breeze much sooner than towns on the other side of the foothill, thus producing a low temperature in summer, and at the same time the proximity to the ocean causes a more equal and warmer temperature in winter.

Fullerton has the best soil, the best water, the best climate, the largest and most productive territory tributary to it, the best railroad facilities, and there is more cash being expended in it on permanent improvements than on any new town in Southern California.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

Why order of sale of real estate should not be made.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE County of Los Angeles, State of California. In the matter of the estate of Francisca Urquidez de Sepulveda, deceased. Fernando Sepulveda, the administrator of the estate of Francisca Urquidez de Sepulveda, deceased, having presented to this Court his petition herein, duly verified, praying for an order of sale of a portion of the real estate of said decedent, to pay the debts, expenses and charges of administration of said estate, and it appearing therefrom to this Court that it is necessary to sell a portion of the real estate of said estate for those purposes and reasons, said petition was thereupon filed.

It is therefore ordered, by the said Court, that all persons interested in the estate of said deceased, appear before the said Superior Court on Tuesday, the 11th day of October, 1887, at ten o'clock A. M. of said day, at the Court-room of Department No. 2 of said Superior Court, at the Jones Block, in the City and County of Los Angeles, State of California, to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said administrator to sell so much of the real estate of the said deceased, as shall be necessary.

And that this order be published at least once a week for four successive weeks, in the Los Angeles Daily HERALD, a newspaper printed and published in said county.

ABOUT HATS.

How Character is Portrayed by the Different Styles.

Did you observe, asks the St. Paul Globe, that a man's disposition can be read by the style of hat he wears and the way he wears it? Not so with a woman. There is more diversity of style in women's hats than men's. But a woman always wears her hat according to the way she has her hair fixed up. So that a woman's hat can be no index to female character.

It is different with men. There is a close intimacy between the styles of men headgear and the science of phrenology. The hat is the bump which infallibly denotes the most prominent trait of character. When a man buys a hat he is governed in the selection by the peculiar organism of the brain. It doesn't make any difference whether the particuiar hat he selects is becoming to him or not, he prefers it because he is built that way. If he wears an unbecoming hat he is not responsible for it. A man never looks into a mirror when he tries a hat on. A woman always does.

The tall silk hat denotes financial ability. Bankers, hotel clerks and police reporters always wear silk hats. Rich men do not always wear silk hats, nor are men who wear silk hats always rich. Still, the silk hat is an unerring sign of a capacity for handling finances successfully. It isn't every man who possesses financial ability that gets rich, nor is it every man who gets rich that possesses skill in financiering. Not by a jug full. We state this that the public mind may not get confused on these points.

The derby hat denotes energy. A man who wears a derby always has the appearance of being on the go. It is a ready-for-all-occasions hat. It is at home whether at church or on the base ball grounds. The derby is a nobby little cross between the silk hat and slouch. It is an accommodating hat. The clergyman looks well in it, and it fits the bar-tender to a "t." And all the time it has a pushing go-aheaditiveness in its appearance that makes everything side-switch when the derby passes by.

And there is the slouch hat. Ah, there is the hat of liberty for you. The slouch hat is the original old commoner. It is the hat for the masses—democratic in style and republican in its simplicity. There is nothing that symbolizes pure, unadulterated Americanism so well as the slouch hat. The slouch hat denotes sociability, It is the unfailing index of genial temperament. It means that the wearer is a good fellow that will do to tie to. He may be a bank president or he may be a cowboy, still you can rely on his being a hail companion wherever you meet him, possessing sturdy independence of character, and always ready to extend a helping hand wherever it is needed.

The man who wears his hat perpendicularly, whether it is a tile, a derby, or a slouch, has the bump of self-esteem well developed. He thinks that he is the upper crust of the pie and is entitled to recognition. The man who wears his hat down over his forehead is a thoughtful man. He is studious and communes with himself a great deal and sometimes inclined to moroseness.

But the man who wears his hat on the back of his head is the one who doesn't care whether school keeps or not. He is independent and self-reliant, and one day is with him as another. He takes note of neither time nor individuals. He is usually popular because he is always generous. Sailors, and soldiers and jockeys and base ball players are not included in this classification because they always wear caps.

CHINA'S GREAT WALL A MYTH.

Surprising Statements Made by a French Missionary.

Abbé Larrieu, formerly a missionary in China, has published a pamphlet on the great wall of China, to demonstrate that this structure does not exist and has never existed. The popular belief is that the wall runs for about 800 leagues across China, from the sea to the province of Kan-Su; that it is wholly constructed of cut stone, and thirty cubits high by twelve broad. It is believed to run straight on regardless of obstacles, going down valleys and up mountains without a break, except such as time had made, along its whole course. This notion originated with a Jesuit named Martini, who visited China about 1650, and his description was followed by subsequent writers. M. Larrieu has lived for several years under what would have been the shadow of the Great Wall had there been one; he has studied the writings of recent writers—especially Abbe Huc—who have crossed the line of the alleged wall in various places; he has likewise studied the Chinese history of the subject, add his conclusions are as follows: (1) The term "Great Wall is at the bottom of all the misunderstanding, and it comes from the Chinese expression, "the wall of the ten thousand li;" (2) as described by Martini and other writers who have copied him, this wall does not and never did exist; (3) a Chinese Emperor undoubtedly did conceive the idea of a great wall from the Gulf of Liao-Long on the east to Kan-Su on the west, and this, though never realized, had a beginning; (4) all along the proposed line of the wall square towers of earth, or of earth faced with brich, were constructed at considerable distances from each other, but these were never joined together by any wall as was originally intended. In some of the defiles along the route there are walls, but these were intended to close these particular passages, or they are merely the walls of villages, and are not parts of a larger scheme. Hence the only part of the scheme of the Great Wall carried out was the construction of these scattered towers; the rest never went beyond the brain that conceived it; it was never more than a fancy, and it is now a myth. This huge Chinese wall, says Abbe Larrieu, is a huge Chinese lie, and as for the million soldiers which were said to guard it night and day, they are myths likewise. The alleged Great Wall is a favorite excursion for Europeans visiting Pekin, and such a question as whether it exists at all or not should be an easy one to settle definitely.—[London Times.

Cacophony.

Like a katydid singing a mandolin's ringing just two doors above with its "zum-zum-zum; and out in the street half a dozen boys beat on the head of a cask for a big bass drum. In the room just below, on the big piano, a maiden is playing the tra-la-la-loo; and the children upstairs, in trios and pairs, are practising songs that are noisy and new. And over it all, through kitchen and hall, too bass for a shriek and too shrill for a squall, like a calliope yowling, our Bridget is howling the one line she's mastered of "Lanigan's Ball." Oh, Phœbus Apollo! they warble and holloa; they shriek up to lizzard and growl down to A; they start in the morning, without any warning, and their second wind comes at the close of the day. Why, the very deaf mute makes a noise with a flute, and a blind man see-saws on a loud violin; and people born dum still can tinkle and strum on things that are rattling and noisy as sin. So their music and songs go it hammer and tongs, old women and maidens and old men and boys; and I'm mad with delight from morning to night—I was born in a mill and am fond of a noise. [Burdette.

MODERN EDUCATION.

The Intellect Cultivated With no Special Purpose in View.

In this country we are laboring with great zeal and vast pecuniary resources to promote the cause of culture. We educate, educate, educate, as somebody once said we ought to do; but whether the result is to produce much that can be called culture in any high sense is an open question. A criterion may, perhaps, be found in a comparison of the rising with the now adult generation. Are our young people showing graces of mind and character in more abundant measure than their parents? Are their aims higher? Is their language better? Are their intellectual occupations more serious? We do not propose to answer these questions dogmatically; but this we say, that unless there has been an improvement in these several respects, a vast amount of educational effort has not met its full reward. Speaking broadly, it seems to us that the culture of our educated classes, or of the classes supposed to be educated, leaves much to be desired, and we are disposed to think one reason of this is that we have conceived of education in too purely an intellectual sense. We have thought more of sharpening the thinking faculties than of liberalizing the sentiments or softening the manners.

We have introduced too much of rivalry into education, and represented education too much as a further rivalry in after life. We have imparted knowledge bui only to a very moderate extent succeeded in inculcating wisdom; and knowledge without wisdom seems poor, thin, and something even meaningless. We need, as it seems to us, to devote more consideration than we have hitherto done to the question: What is the true idea of human life? If we can fix upon the true ideal, we can proceed to educate towards that, and our work will then be directed towards something that is an end in itself. The knowledge we impart will be held by a different tenure and applied in a different spirit. What each one knows will be his or her equipment toward a worthier fulfillment of social duties, a worthier realization of what is best in himself or herself, and not a mere stock in trade for the procuring of personal gratifications. What we would chiefly insist upon at present, however, is that, were knowledge pursued in a right spirit, the intellectual gain would be very great. Minds would become more receptive, owing both to the superiority of the motive set before them and the higher degree of rationality that the whole system of human life and thought would assume.—[Popular Science.

BODIES BURIED AT SEA.

Steamers Have No Means of Keeping Them.

When a death occurs at sea a certificate is filed containing all information as to the probable causes which produced death, and also as to the manner of disposing of the body. The bodies of persons who die at sea are kept twenty-four hours. In bygone times a superstition prevailed among sailors that if a dead body was kept aboard a vessel destruction would be its inevitable doom, but the notion does not exist among modern sailors. Monday, August 8th, B. B. Dayton of Amboy, New York, while returning from abroad on the Cunard steamer Etruria, died suddenly and his body was buried at sea. The action of the officers in thus disposing of the body gave rise to much adverse criticism. Some of the passengers said that the services were not of a becoming nature. This report has reached the ears of the dead man's wife and family and their friends. In order that the facts of the case might be understood, the following statement was made by the officers of the ship;

"The body was discovered dead in the state-room about 9 o'clock Monday evening. Immediately the doctor of the ship made it ready for burial. After the usual preparations were completed the remains were laid out and enshrouded with an English flag, because that contains a cross. Tuesday morning the body was sewed up in canvas and then deposited in a wooden-box, covered over with the flag. Solemnly and with every evidence of respect the remains were carried on the shoulders of eight sailors to the after-gangway. Chief Officer Seccomb, a humane and Christian sailor, had charge of the funeral arrangements. A few moments after 8 o'clock Tuesday morning the ship's officers and a lage number of the cabin passengers encircled the body and the funeral services were conducted by a minister, one of the passengers. At their conclusion and when the minister read the words, "I now consign this body to the deep," the box, heavily weighted down with iron, was slid into the ocean. No secrecy prevailed, and everything was done in a proper and orderly manner, being witnessed by any of the passengers who were so desirous."

A burial at sea is a solemn and impressive event, and not many passengers like to witness it. A death at sea casts a gloom over the rest of the passengers, and, naturally enough, the officers try to do everything connected with the burial with as little ostentation and display as possible. On every steamer the custom is to bury the dead at sea. The captain of the ship is the sole arbiter in this matter. Whenever it is possible the body is carried into port, provided the officers are convinced that the body will be claimed upon its arrival. All seamen are firm supporters of the theory that all persons dying on the high seas, unless a short distance from port, should be given up to the deep. On a heavily-laden steamer no room is provided where a dead body could be possibly preserved. The medicine chest usually carried does not contain the necessary articles required to embalm the body.

The French and White Star lines carry metallic coffins, and where the friends of a deceased person manifest a desire or are anxious to undergo the expense, the body will be preserved and carried to port if it can be done without danger to the other passengers. Numerous cases have occurred where men of wealth and distinction traveling for their health have been buried at sea simply because they were unaccompanied and no evidence of who they were could be obtained. No law exists, as some steamship men claim, that makes it compulsory upon the captain of a ship to bury a dead body at sea.—[N. Y. World.

Electro-Magnetism.

THE NEW MEANS OF CURE—DR. E. Robbins' Electro-Magnetic Institute, corner of First and Spring streets (entrance on First street) is now fitted up, at considerable expense, with everything that is necessary to cure chronic and so-called incurable diseases, by the finest electrical apparatuses in the world. Turkish and Russian baths; also Electric, Sulphur and Eucalyptus baths. Dr. Robbins has had several years' experience in the Australian Colonies, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Denver, and four years in Los Angeles, and hundreds of leading citizens can testify to the wonderful effects of electricity in curing cases of chronic diseases when all else had failed, and therefore all persons suffering should try this new remedy before abandoning all hope. After every medical treatment the patients are given the Massage Treatment by persons of their own sex.
